NOTE: The full-text is created with optical character recognition (OCR). The accuracy of the OCR text depends on factors such as the age of the scanned document, the type of paper on which the document was printed, and the extent of staining or other marking that obscures text on the document image. As OCR text may not be completely accurate, word or phrase searches may not find all documents meeting the search criteria.

NOTE: The search engine is not case sensitive. When entering search criteria, you may use all lowercase letters, all capital letters, or any combination of lowercase and capital letters.

Enter word(s) and/or phrase(s) of interest to search the full-text along with Boolean logic, wildcards and Proximity commands to narrow or expand your search.

AND finds documents that contain both words and phrases entered. For example, Stalin AND Hitler find 1,643 documents that contain both names.

Document Number/ESDN

Enter a unique document identifier or Executive Standard Document Number (ESDN) to limit your search to a single document.

NOTE: All documents will have a unique ID, but not all documents will have an ESDN. The ESDN is created by the concatenation of an archive job, box, and folder number with a document number that is generated when reviewed. The job, box, and folder number track the location of the hardcopy record at the archive until such time as the record is transferred to the National Archives and Record Administration. Some documents do not have an ESDN because the document released was not retrieved from the archive.

- Job (e.g., 54-00252A): The job number is a nine-character identifier for a group of records retired together. A job of archived records generally span 10 years and contains records that have the same disposition under the same Records Control Schedule Item. The first two characters of the job number indicate the year the records were retired and characters four through nine are generated to create a unique ID for the job.
- Box (e.g., Box 0001): The box identifier is the number assigned to a specific box within a job. It is a sequential number within a job. Records are divided within a job to keep each archive box under 35 lbs. to facilitate safe lifting by archive staff.
- Folder (e.g., Folder 0001): The folder identifier is a sequential number assigned to each folder within a box.
- Job, box, folder and document numbers are embedded within the ESDN as shown:
 - CIA-RDP-54-00252A000100010015-2

CIA	RDP	54-00252A	0001	0001	0015-2
Agency	Prefix	Job Number	Box Number	Folder Number	Document Number

To limit your search to all items within a specific job, use the wildcard search. For example, 33-02415A will limit your search to items contained in job 33-02415A.
