There is a Soviet military airfield about 10 kilometers south of Chojnow (Haynau) (5116N1556E) near Legnica, between Schoenfeld, Seifersdorf (5118N-1647E) and Tscheschendorf. The airfield is unpaved and has no concrete runways; it is generally in very poor condition and is used only during summer maneuvers and when other airfields are under repair. No steady crew is stationed at the field.
