The following is an explanation of the liquid fuel shipments

Virtually no liquid fuels are carried on inland waterways. Available ship space is principally used for the storage of fuel and not for transportation. The amounts of fuel for April and May 1954 are, for the most part, stored fuel, for example, that in Magdeburg. From these storage places fuel is delivered and then replenished again. According to available information since 1953, no tankers have been employed for the transportation of fuel but were used only for storage purposes.
