1. When Malavin took over as Chief of USIVA from General Borisov at the beginning of November 1947, he found the situation within USIVA steadily deteriorating for reasons including the following:

   a. Wide-scale corruption among USIVA officials who diverted huge quantities of USIVA products into the black market for personal gain.

   b. Under Borisov, USIVA had been managed more as a political than an economic enterprise, and the directors of various USIVA sections carried out orders according to their own interpretations without coordination with other sections.
