CIA'S NATIONAL CLANDESTINE SERVICE

FIELD-FOCUSED CAREERS

This is more than a job – it is a way of life for professionals like you who accept nothing less than the highest personal satisfaction from your work. Discover the truth for our nation's policymakers by collecting, evaluating and disseminating vital information on political, military, economic and scientific developments.

OPERATIONS OFFICER

- Build strong personal relationships to develop and recruit sources to obtain high-value foreign intelligence.
- Deal with fast-moving and unstructured situations to conduct clandestine intelligence collection operations worldwide.
- Use professionalism, street smarts, integrity and willingness to work in any environment to address intelligence issues.

COLLECTION MANAGEMENT OFFICER

- Manage the collection, dissemination and evaluation of foreign intelligence.
- Handle foreign sources to acquire critical intelligence.
- Ensure intelligence is clearly and accurately conveyed while protecting sources and methods.
- Represent the NCS as a subject matter expert in the US Intelligence Community both domestically and overseas.

PARAMILITARY OFFICER

- Utilize skills acquired as a military professional from Special Operations and Combat Arms with significant overseas and combat experience.
- Conduct special operations and intelligence activities, often in austere and hazardous environments.

Extraordinary people with a vital mission – these are the men and women of the National Clandestine Service.
