WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Foreign Relations Committee wants the latest intelligence from CIA Director Adm. Stansfield Turner on the likely results of President Carter's plans to withdraw U.S. ground troops from South Korea.

Sen. Clifford Case, R-N.J., says the panel wants to hear from Turner about "a new assessment of the risks and advantages" of a Korean pullout.

Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., committee chairman, said Friday there is no "urgency" about the new assessment and no date was set for Turner's meeting with the committee.

Sparkman said the new information does not conclude that Carter's plan to remove ground forces from Korea is risky.

Undersecretary of State Philip C. Habib said he understood Carter had the new intelligence assessment when he decided to withdraw the 33,000 U.S. troops over the next four to five years.

Habib and Gen. George Brown Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, briefed Carter, a House subcommittee and the Senate panel Friday on their consultations with Korean and Japanese officials on the pullout.

Brown told the House committee Carter's planned withdrawal will risk war only if North Korea behaves irrationally.

"War would not result from a rational decision," he said. "We cannot account for irrational acts by the other side.

"There is some risk involved but it is of an acceptable degree," he said.

Brown said the heads of the nation's armed services do not agree with Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub that a pullout will risk war. He also said no other U.S. general in Korea has expressed that opinion to him.

Carter removed Singlaub from his post as U.S. chief of staff in Korea for publicly expressing his view that the pullout involves a risk of war. Singlaub has been reassigned.

Singlaub told the House Armed Services Committee in earlier testimony that he did not know of any serving U.S. officer in Korea who does not agree with his views on the pullout.
