DECLASSIFIED AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY
SOURCE METHOD EXEMPTION 3B2B
NAZI WAR CRIMES DISCLOSURE ACT
DATE 2007

Conduct When under Arrest:

A. If captured with compromising material immediately after landing:

1. If there is a possibility for resistance, attempt to escape.
2. If no resistance is possible, give up quietly and give following information:

- a. Americans forced you into their service and you are glad at the opportunity to get on the "right" side. Admit training in Munich for very short period of time beginning after the Berlin uprising. Your mission was to contact _____ who the Americans claimed was in touch with a large partisan force. Bill was to give the orders to incite the partisans to a revolt similar to Germans. Bill was given very little training and knows only a few case officers. He is not familiar with any installations since he had no chance to become acquainted with the country. He was under constant guard.

This story can only gain Bill sufficient time to either plan an escape or bribe the officials by pointing out that if they let him go they can keep his money rather than having to turn it over to the authorities.

Only if no avenue to escape is open should Bill consider the "L" tablet.

3. If Bill is forced to give a true account, he should never admit the following:
 - a. His true name or "JACK."
 - b. His Canadian residence.
 - c. His British training. No admission of having been in England should ever be made.
 - d. His training cite. He should attempt to describe a training area similar to his survival school, omitting any reference to Washington.
 - e. The names of any instructors or persons with whom he associated.
 - f. The specific subjects in which he was taught.
4. Bill under great pressure can admit:
 - a. His true past without identifying his person.

SECURITY INFORMATION

- b. That he was brought to U.S. from Germany.
 - c. A general description of his training, emphasizing weapons, communications, parachuting, survival.
 - d. His mission to contact partisans through persons given him by the Americans.
 - e. The training area located in an area similar to the survival school.
 - f. Admit his visits to New York where he went for weekends for entertainment (mainly movies) and Atlantic City for swimming.
- B. If captured after caching compromising articles:
1. If at all possible, insist that the cover story is his true story.
 2. Under some pressure admit that his superior was working to make him a stakhanovite and that he was able thereby to make more money than the average truckdriver and that he sewed the money into his clothes by himself.
 3. If pressed too hard or if a check-back reveals he is not from Belomorsk, admit buying the pasport in Vilnius on the black market. Admit other shady deals explaining the money.
 4. As a last resort, admit being forced to work for the partisans and used as a courier to carry money collected by other partisans from Siauliai to Vilnius (Kaunas). Explain that the money was buried in a certain spot near Siauliai and that he had to bring part of it to another location for reburial for other partisans. Offer to make the cache of money known to the officials for a promise of release. Explain that this is the first time you do this and that you were forced into this act because you had a black market pasport. They promised you 1000 rubles for this. If he refused, they had threatened to kill him.

NOTE: [] reaction to these instructions indicated that he would never reveal either his identity or his true mission. He stated that he valued his friends too highly (these were his American friends) and also the welfare of his family remaining in Lithuania. [] claimed that he had given thought to the problem of capture for over six years and that ~~he~~ should he fall into enemy hands he would have a story prepared that would cause the downfall of some great Soviet leader. It was explained to him that there exists a good possibility that if he gets captured the truth may be forced from him. He very positively stated that he would rather die first.
