SUBJECT: Soviet Delegation to the 1st Session of the Plenary Assembly of all
World Federations/ UN Associations, New York 9-14 Sep 1963

SOURCE: M & K

1. M and K met Soviet Delegates three times on 14 Sep 1963, in the afternoon and evening, at the Conference (Conference Room # 4) United Nations Building). In general, Soviet delegates were reserved though tried to be friendly, kept separately from other delegates, incl. even those from Africa and Asia. Our people noticed that after MOLODTSOV phoned to someone at about 20.00 hrs the attitude to K and M very much changed to the worse. They remained still polite but "cooler" than before incl. ATAMALI who in the beginning seemed to be quite willing to talk.

M and K introduced themselves as Americans of Ukrainian descent studying Russian and interested in international relations, in particular in activities of the United Nations Associations.

12) ATAMALI Valid Bey (introduced himself to K also as ALATIM or ATALIM),

Azerbaijani, appar. age 40, 5'7, 175 lb, brown hair combed straight back, receding in front; green eyes, looks like a Gypsy. Smoked pipe, quite talkative and friendly. Lives in BAKU. Refused to give his private address and "suggested" to ~~xxxx~~ contact him through the HQs of the Soviet UN Association in Moscow, 1-aya Cherepushkinskaya 19.

His mother was Ukrainian and he himself knew very well Ukraine and Ukrainian people. According to ATAMALI there was a genuine friendship between the Azerbaijanians and Ukrainians and he "loved Ukraine like his own country".

a) Revival of "local" element

When discussing Soviet internal politics ATAMALI stressed that since Stalin's death there had been a significant revival of non-Russian local element all over the Soviet Union and the concept of the amalgamation of nations did not mean a liquidation of individual nations. Therefore, if M wanted to study eventually Ukrainian and not only Russian he would do right because particularly Ukrainians "were coming now more and more to the fore". The accusation of rusification he parried with admission that in many cases, of course, "some people on lower party and administration echelons had misinterpreted the concept of amalgamation of nations which was meant primarily as a mutual enrichment in cultural field beneficial to all nations of the USSR". "The Ukraine was no fiction" - he assured M - "even if many people talked Russian".

b. Other topics

ATAMALI could not say anything about recent changes in the Ukraine "because he had not been there at the time PODGORNYY was transferred to Moscow." He assured that there was a close collaboration between all the Republics but could not say whether ~~also~~ other republics ,beside Ukrainian and Byelorussian ones, will have ~~also~~ their representations at the UN in the future. Also other political topics he commented with " I-do-not-knows" or generalities.

9/ It was M's impression that under different circumstances ATAMALI might have said a little bit more . He seemed ,however, to be afraid of compromising himself and in particular in the evening evidently avoided M's and K's company.

2. TSURINOV, Konstantin Valerianovich - Russian, 5'7, app. age 45, slim, oval face, brown hair, wears glasses, black eyes, speaks French and poor English.

a/ TSURINOV was rather reluctant to talk, stressed that there was no need for "Ukrainian and other UN-Associations because we all were united in one Soviet Association", "The Soviet government wanted peace and all Soviet peoples hoped for genuine detente with America".

3. MOLODTSOV, Stepan Vasilevich - Russian, 5'6, fat, receding (balding) hair, square face, app. age 38-40, blue eyes, wears glasses, self-assured and almost arrogant.

All the time ~~index~~ used phrases, rejected all the arguments put forward by M and K, and assured them that "all was fine and perfect". According to him there was no russification in the Ukraine, all were taught in the Ukraine in Ukrainian, also, asf. He told M that they were staying in Hotel Tudor and were going to leave ~~on~~ next Monday. (LAGUTIN said that probably on Tuesday.) MOLODTSOV had the title of Professor and was addressed by all as such.
