Nazi Hunter Raises New Charges on Barbie

PARIS, Feb. 15 (AP) — French officials knew Klaus Barbie, the convicted war criminal, was in Bolivia working for the Central Intelligence Agency and West German intelligence for at least eight years before they tried to get him expelled, Serge Klarsfeld, the Nazi hunter, said today.

Mr. Klarsfeld also repeated charges that authorities in the American zone of Germany frustrated French attempts to get Mr. Barbie for five years immediately after World War II. Official action resumed only in 1972 after Mr. Klarsfeld and his wife, Beate, made public Mr. Barbie's whereabouts to press French authorities, he said in an article in Le Monde. Mr. Barbie was expelled from Bolivia to France this month and is in jail in Lyons.

Le Monde printed the text of what Mr. Klarsfeld said was a secret French Army report dated Nov. 7, 1963. It reported what it called official German information that Mr. Barbie had been employed and protected by American authorities after the German surrender, that he was living in La Paz, the Bolivian capital, from 1961 or 1962, and that he was believed to have a cover job organized by the C.I.A. and the West German intelligence service.
