DEPUTIES' MEETING

Wednesday, 27 June 1956

PRESENT: Mr. Dulles, Mr. Wisner, Mr. Amory, Col. White, Messrs. Helms, Sheldon (part of mtg.), General Truscott, [redacted]

25X1

Mr. Dulles:

a. Noted that [redacted] (who had accompanied [redacted] [redacted] a member of the President's Board of Consultants, to [redacted] had reported during a conversation yesterday that in his opinion [redacted] survey of activities of these two stations had in general gone well. [redacted] [redacted] felt that our relationship with the Service Attaches needed improvement. Messrs. Wisner and Helms stated they were inclined to agree with this observation and commented that this deficiency, where it existed, had been brought to the attention of the Chiefs of Stations concerned. Mr. Helms also remarked that while we briefed outgoing attaches prior to departure, he believed these briefings could be beefed-up. The Director said he saw no reason why our people could not get together with the attaches at least once a week and furnish them intelligence items collected through our sources which are primarily military in nature and permit the attaches to send such items to their parent service in Washington. The Director then asked if CIA is on record with the military services offering their attaches briefings. Mr.
Helms indicated he was sure we are and undertook to check this and report to the Director our SOP with regard to briefing attaches together with recommendations as to how this can be improved.

b. Referred to Mr. Baird's proposal that CIA establish a School of International Communism and after some discussion it was agreed this proposal would be circulated to the deputies for their comments and further discussion with the Director as to how this matter could be worked out. ACTION: Col. White.

Col. White:

In response to a query from the Director, reported that since the emergency had been declared [redacted] twelve families (dependents) had departed, and the biggest problem we had at this location was obtaining qualified replacements for people returning home on rotation. In this connection [redacted] The Director said he did not believe that we should do this at the present time, however, he would like to consider it at a later date.

Mr. Amory:

Noted that Mr. Leo G. Cyr, Director of the Office of African Affairs, had received three private reports that Morocco would join the Arab League and suggested that DD/P might wish to check this report from his sources. Mr. Wisner undertook to do so.
