Mr. John A. McCone, Director
Central Intelligence Agency
2430 E Street, N.W.
Washington 25, D C.

Dear Mr. McCone

On 18 July, the Technical Security Group of the Office of Special Investigations, USAF, had an urgent requirement for specific items of technical equipment. This equipment had to be obtained within a matter of hours.

Because of the support that has been given us in the past, and the excellent and close relationship that exists between our agencies, we turned to your tech people for assistance. Through the efforts of your [redacted] the research, supply and funding transactions, which ordinarily consume several days, was accomplished in about two hours. The successful completion of our mission can be attributed primarily to the support which you gave us.

STAT

I wish to express our gratitude for the help that we have received on this and several other occasions, and assure you of our sincere desire to continue the very close working relationship between OSI and CIA.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. McCone

29 June 1962

For the past three years, Mr. [ ] of your Agency's Directorate of Plans, has served as liaison officer with the Air Force on matters pertaining to collection operations. It is understood that he is now leaving this post for another assignment within your organization.

STAT

I should like to take this opportunity to express my appreciation for the splendid cooperation and unstinting assistance given us by Mr. [ ]. His broad experience and his perceptive, non-parochial approach to problems of mutual concern have resulted in closer working relationships between our organizations, thus serving not only our respective interests but those of the national intelligence community at large.

STAT

Please express to Mr. [ ] our sincere gratitude for his good services and our very best wishes for continued success in his new assignment.

STAT

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. McCone:

It is a pleasure to inform you that Mr. [REDACTED] of the Central Intelligence Agency, who was selected to attend the Resident Course of the Industrial College of the Armed Forces for the academic year 1961-1962, completed his assignment on 12 June 1962.

You will recall that the College has been charged by the Joint Chiefs of Staff with the responsibility for furthering the preparation of selected military and civilian personnel for important command, staff, and policymaking assignments within our national and international security structure. The resident course embraces the economic and industrial aspects of national security under all conditions, together with the interrelated military, logistical, scientific, technological, political, and social factors affecting national security, in the context of both national and world affairs. Attendance at the College involves continuous close contact and joint effort with officers and civilians of the other services and high echelons of our government.

Mr. [REDACTED] has participated wholeheartedly in the program of the College. He has brought to it an understanding and knowledge of the responsibilities and problems of the Central Intelligence Agency which have helped materially to broaden the base of our studies. In his approach to the study of national security problems he has demonstrated an ability for clear and logical thinking which has earned for him the regard of members of the faculty and student body alike. His work here has been commendable.

Attention is invited to the broad basic education which Mr. [REDACTED] has received in the complex and difficult problems involved in our national security effort. It is anticipated that such education will assist him immeasurably in his future work, whatever his particular assignments may be. Proportionate benefits will, of
