Assistant Dean William P. Gormbley,
Director, Advanced Management Program
Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration
Soldiers Field
Boston 63, Massachusetts

Dear Dean Gormbley:

Colonel Lawrence K. White, my Deputy Director for Support and one of the senior officers of this Agency, is an applicant to attend the session of the Advanced Management Program starting in February, 1959. I heartily endorse his application.

Colonel White was retired from the U. S. Army due to injuries incurred in combat towards the close of World War II. Shortly afterwards he entered on duty with this Agency in an administrative capacity. His marked ability led to his selection in 1952 as Deputy to the Chief of all administrative services for the Agency and later to his appointment as Deputy Director for Support. In this position he is responsible for all support activities such as personnel, budget and finance, logistics, training and all related functions. Since this Agency has many unusual and complex support requirements, Colonel White has had an unusually varied and heavy responsibility and from this experience, particularly in the last few years, I think he can make valuable contributions to the Advanced Management Program and his fellow students.

The Program, on the other hand, holds great opportunity for Colonel White. An excellent military career certainly contributed to his capabilities, but in the fresh and varied field of civilian administration he has successfully carried out his functions without benefit of formal training. The Program will expose him to new and different management theories and practices and will offer him the opportunity to review his own management concepts in the light of new ideas and informed discussion.

EXECUTIVE REGISTRY FILE

As a student, Colonel White would, I am sure, be highly popular with his fellows and the faculty. Added to the interest of his background and position is a congenial nature and a sense of humor well supplied with a fund of anecdotes. He is active in church and civic matters and maintains a wide interest in current events. I feel, therefore, that Col. White's participation in the Program would bring mutual benefit and pleasure.

Sincerely,

Signed

Assistant Dean William P. Gormbly
Director, Advanced Management Program
Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration

Dear Dean Gormbly:

Colonel Lawrence K. White, my Deputy Director for Support and one of the senior officers of this Agency, is an applicant to attend the session of the Advanced Management Program starting in February, 1959. I heartily endorse his application for the following reason.

Colonel White was retired from the U. S. Army on account of injuries incurred in combat towards the close of World War II. Shortly after the war he entered on duty with this Agency in an administrative capacity. His marked ability led to his selection in 1954 as Deputy to the Chief of all administrative services for the Agency and later to his appointment as Deputy Director for Support of the Agency. In this position he is responsible for all support activities of the Agency, such as personnel, budget and finance, logistics, training, and all related functions. Since this Agency has many unusual and complex support requirements, Colonel White has had an unusually varied and heavy responsibility, and from this experience, particularly in the last few years, I think he can make valuable contributions to the Advanced Management Program and his fellow students.

The Program, on the other hand, holds great opportunity for Colonel White. An excellent military career certainly contributed to his capabilities, but in the fresh and varied field of civilian administration he has successfully carried out his functions without benefit of formal training. The Program will expose him to new and different management theories and practices and will offer him the opportunity to review his own management concepts in the light of new ideas and informed discussion.

As a student, Colonel White would I am sure be highly popular with his fellows and the faculty.
