Dear Mr. Redford:

I wish to thank you very much for your letter of 16 April inviting me to speak at the annual meeting of the American Political Science Association on 11 September.

As I wrote Professor Cole, it is sincerely regretted that I will be unable to attend as I am planning to be out of the country at that time. However, your courtesy in asking me to join you on this particular occasion is indeed appreciated and I would like to take this opportunity to wish you every success in your annual meeting.

With kindest regards.

Sincerely,

SIGNED

Allen W. Dulles

STAT

1. It's too early for the Director to make a definite commitment. It is also time to not make a full commitment without first finding out how many major speeches the Director will make in this calendar year. He may wish to make one in September or a little later, but I think it is far too soon to commit him now. This is certainly a worthwhile organization, but whether it is the best forum for the Director should he agree to make the talk in September, cannot be determined at this time.

Dear Mr. Dulles:

The American Political Science Association holds its Annual Meeting at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington, D. C., on September 10-12, 1959. This meeting will be attended by approximately 1, 500 political scientists in educational, governmental, journalistic and other types of service from all parts of the country, and also by a considerable number of foreign visitors.

In addition to our panel sessions, there will be two major addresses at general meetings. The first will be given on the evening of September 10 by our President, Professor Taylor Cole of Duke University. The second will be on the evening of September 11 and for this meeting we desire to give attention, as in many of our panel sessions, to the position of the United States in foreign affairs and to the urgent problems in international relations.

Professor Cole, the Executive Committee of the Association and I would like for you to give this address. On behalf of the Association, I want to invite you to address the members of the Association and other visitors on a topic of your choice.

Mr. Allen W. Dulles
Director
Central Intelligence Agency
Washington 25, D. C.

Mr. Allen W. Dulles

We earnestly hope you will be able to accept this invitation. If, in considering the invitation, you desire further information about the meeting, you may talk with Dr. Evron M. Kirkpatrick or me at the Association headquarters in Washington.

Respectfully yours,

Emmette S. Redford
Chairman, 1959 Program Committee
