Dear Mr. Williams:

Thank you for your letter of 5 November in which you indicate interest in cooperating with any of our people who may be considering writing a book.

While there is nothing specific at the moment, we do encourage our people to write in their fields of specialization and should any of them engage in writing a book, I'll be most happy to refer your kind offer to them.

Sincerely,

Dear Allen:

In a column by Marquis Childs, he says that you would like to see some of the able economic and political analysts in C.I.A. write and speak publicly on their specialties.

Should any of your experts be thinking in terms of book writing, this firm would be more than glad to know what their plans may be, with a view to offering such co-operation as it can.

Every best wish to you,

Sincerely yours,

John L. B. Williams
