My dear Mr. Dulles:

Referring further to your letter of

As you undoubtedly know, [Redacted] is now back in this country. [Redacted] Vice President in charge of our [Redacted] has just had the opportunity to talk with [Redacted] and I believe I can do no better than give you the following paragraph taken from

"He [Redacted] tells me that he wishes to to do so beginning the week of July 28. He also tells me that he was asked to accept a new assignment in connection with the same matter but that he did not wish to accept this new assignment. He has so informed the people involved."

CONFIDENTIAL

Mr. Allen W. Dulles
Acting Director
Central Intelligence Agency
Washington 25, D. C.

My dear Mr. Dulles:

25X1

Thank you very much for your letter of June 18 delivered by [redacted] as, naturally, I am greatly pleased that [redacted] has made the fine contribution to his assigned duties which you describe.

25X1

In a letter received from [redacted] some few months ago, he then hoped to be released from his Government assignment in April 1952. Normal Company procedure is that when a member of our organization seems qualified for a particular Government assignment he is made available for a period of one year. With so many organization changes being made due to the expansion of the Company's business, it is felt that if a man remains away from his normal assignments more than a year this will react adversely to his progress and advancement within the Company, and, understandably, we are always anxious that each individual employee be given every possible opportunity for personal advancement.

25X1

Thus, before replying directly to your question, as to whether [redacted] services could be made available for an additional year, I am relaying your question to

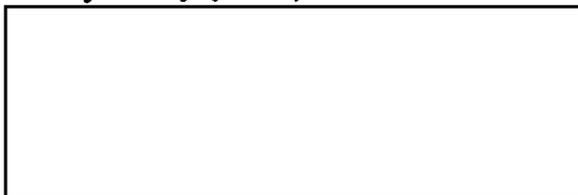

25X1

[redacted] Vice President and General Manager of our [redacted] immediate superior in the Company. As soon as I hear from him I will write you further.

25X1

Very truly yours,
