

29 December 1950

Dear Woody:

Sorry to have delayed so long in answering your letter but as [redacted] has probably told you, I am up to my ears. This has one advantage: I have been able to dodge practically all social activities.

STAT

Nory and I are comfortably settled in our new house and are in love with it, but the prospects for hunting or fishing in the foreseeable future are very poor. You will have to do my share for me I am afraid.

Let us know when you are going to be in Washington next. We both want to see you.

Sincerely,

W. B. Smith
