Subj: Exploitation of Enemy Documents (CIG21)

1. Further to the agreement reached in par. 6 of minutes of the Inter-departmental Coordinating and Planning Staff of the Central Intelligence Group dated 11 December 1946 I have contacted the Washington enemy document depository agencies and herewith submit further information in the premises of the possibilities of coordinated exploitation of such documents relating to political-social-psychological warfare.

2. The information furnished by the various agencies expressed the separate evaluations of the document activities as to:

(a) The approximate measure of the quantities of captured enemy documents not processed to date through the abstracting and mounting on accession list stage in tons, cubic, or other interpretable measurement.

(b) The approximate percentage by spot sampling or other more accurate gauge of the total captured enemy documents "not processed to date" which relate to political-social-psychological matters.

3. The current or short-range prediction of the rate of "eating up the backlog" described in sub paragraph (a) above.

(c) No progress from point of view of this study until after July 1947 under current priority to examine other intelligence material.

Special Comments:

1. At least one competent man would be required to research the files of Kulturabteilung of the German Foreign Office for the purposes of CIG 21. Such a research man would have advantages of performing his work in conjunction with State Department's Exploitation of German Archives Team at Berlin.

2. Library of Congress indicates two of their unpackers, three examiners, and two repackers might be able to isolate materials of interest to the research team in approximately three months. The Library of Congress would require only such financial support in this project to the extent of pay for two unpackers and three examiners for approximately a three-month period.

Recommendation:

1. That two four-man research teams be put to the task of accomplishing the purposes of CIG 21; one team to research the materials in continental United States; one team to research the materials in the European Theater.
