RWANDA:

Hutu Population on the Move

The fall of Kigali and Butare is threatening to double the number of displaced people requiring assistance.

- Officials of the rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front say government forces are fleeing from Kigali, [redacted]

- French forces say they are protecting about 300,000 Rwandans in southwestern Gikongoro, and another 40,000 civilians are heading west toward Kibuye, according to press accounts.

- Relief workers estimate 250,000 fled south from Butare over the weekend. [redacted] They have not yet entered Burundi, so they probably are also heading for safehavens in Rwanda. [redacted]

Relief agencies will need several weeks to move enough supplies and personnel into these desolate areas, and the number of needy is sure to grow. [redacted]
