COURSE OBJECTIVES - CONTENT AND METHODS

This course was especially designed to acquaint a group of field security investigators with the fundamentals of intelligence, the background of the National Security Council and the intelligence community, and the current organization and functions of CIA. Staff lectures, seminars, films, and a few guest lecturers were used as training methods. Several written transcripts of lectures were given out as reading material, in cases where the guest speakers could not come in person.

For prerequisite purposes, this course may be considered the equivalent of Introduction to Intelligence.
