Der Präsident
des Bundesnachrichtendienstes

München, den 4 April 1957

Dear Mr. Dulles:

May I extend to you my heartiest and most sincere wishes for your birthday and wish you health and continuing success for your responsible task during the next years of your life.

I would like to take this opportunity to enclose my kindest thanks for your cordial hospitality my co-workers and I enjoyed during our stay over there. The excellent briefings revealed to me an impressive picture of the manifold tasks and the successful work of your service. As a result of the given insight and the various discussions I received instructive suggestions for the further extension and build-up of the Bundesnachrichtendienst.

I do hope to have the pleasure to welcome you, dear Mr. Dulles, as my guest in the same spirit of friendship here in Munich at a time which is convenient to you.
