On the roster of truly infamous Vichy personnel these names appear also: Marion, Secretary of Information; Pucheu, Secretary of State for Industrial Production and Minister of the Interior after July 1941; Scapini, delegate to the Wiesbaden Armistice Commission in charge of prisoners of war, but spending most of his time in Berlin; Belin, Minister of Labor. The latter was one of those Marxists who have no use whatever of either civil, political, or national liberty in their program, one of those union manipulators inclined to think that dictatorship more than any other system of government can satisfy working-class demands. None of these men possessed any qualities to recommend them to the marshal's favor. Marion was just a piece of communist wreckage.
