1. The following paragraphs comprise a round-up and scattered comments upon the recent visit reported in reference:

A: A further meeting with [] was not arranged, as Callender's boss was taken seriously ill, as you must be aware, and, consequently, will be in Paris only for a day before taking a boat which arrives in New York on 18th March. I did, however, have an opportunity to talk with him about the results of his trip, including the trip to Germany. He gave me a copy of the communication sent as a result of these visits. He commented that he had written personally to the Chairman of the Executive Committee (IDEN) and showed me his last letter to him. He said that he, in reporting to the President of QKIVORY, would urge that the matter be followed up as soon as possible and that he would suggest that the President of the Executive Committee be the person to make a spring trip to formalize arrangements. He observed indirectly and certainly ~~this opinion, mostly so as to strengthen it so~~ my opinion, that the President of QKIVORY's Special Representative is incapable of and would badly effect the prestige of TPEELING if he were to be given this job and any continuing responsibility in relation thereto. It should be noted that both this person and his wife are extremely heavy drinkers -- a fact which has come to the attention of everyone concerned with him during this visit.

FINE!

B: Callender's boss said that he had a good session with Callender and that many of the things which he wished to discuss with him, Callender had good explanations for and that he was satisfied with Callender's conduct. I gathered that he did not wish to discuss this matter much further and that, because of his illness, he probably had not been as tough or gone into as much detail with Callender as he had intended.

2. The following are further notes on these gentlemen's meeting with [] in addition to that reported in reference:

[] was very firm in his belief of the delicacy of TPFEEELING's operation and equally clear that even leading European politicians had very little understanding of its policies and its operation. He welcomed the ideas presented in the manner described in reference cable and was very positive that a representative European Committee is the way to proceed. He also was struck by the fact that the explorations being made represented a complete reversal of policy, insofar as QKIVORY and TPFEEELING were concerned. He was later told by [] that this was not entirely true as the original intention had been to make these operations a cooperative venture by the French and British as well, but that the British had refused to go along. It was agreed by the QKIVORY representatives that I would bring to [] attention materials which would explain and give [] an indication of the kind of things TPFEEELING was doing and the measure of effectiveness in these undertakings. I discussed this matter and the materials available with [] in my recent meeting, and he has now delivered the materials necessary which I will deliver to []

3. My overall impression of this mission is that it has been entirely successful and that QKIVORY should move with reasonable urgency to implement and create a committee. If this initiative is not followed up reasonably soon, great damage will have been done with TPFEEELING, as it would undoubtedly be said that this mission was not serious and responsible. It should be underlined in discussions with [] he did not at any time indicate that such an advisory board would expect to have any role in the day-to-day operations with TPFEEELING. If Headquarters should wish, any further discussions of this matter can be held with []

Callender's boss told ^{me} him of an incident involving Callender which created difficulties for you. As I understand it, Callender went to ODACID without clearance with his boss or with you in a matter involving the termination of some stipendaries. The documents sent under separate cover reveal a similar incident of this kind. We do not feel that it would be particularly useful to discuss this matter with the ODACID person involved here, but rather Callender's boss should make it perfectly clear to Callender that this kind of "end running" can not be tolerated. I can follow up with Callender in any way you wish.
