8. AEREADY-2 expressed his concern about the package program and stated that he was having difficulty in establishing appropriate addressors for the program. Although there are a good number of Byelorussians in the United States, Canada and South America corresponding with their families in Byelorussia, he felt they would be reluctant to have their names used in any way which might jeopardize their safety. AEREADY-2 had thought of setting up several fictitious addressors; to wit, a Byelorussian who had died since his arrival in the United States. AEREADY-2 has a friend who owns an apartment house in Brooklyn. None of the tenants are Byelorussians. AEREADY-2 thinks that he can persuade his friend to put up an extra mailbox for a fictitious resident who could be used as an addressor for the package program.

AEREADY-2 submitted the names of 2 addressees (attached) for the package program. One of the names submitted is that of a present "Communist activist" who is well known by AEREADY-2. He stated that the individual is a childhood friend of his who assumed the "good communist" role as a necessity to maintaining better employment. AEREADY-2 feels this individual would be a real asset in time of need because he may be in a position of some authority. He feels that if the package program is to be risked at all, individuals should be sought for who would be in a position to really do something in time of need. He said there were many problems of addressee-addressor relationship which need to be ironed out in his own mind before the program can be started. The undersigned told him she was glad he had given so much consideration to the various aspects involved and told him there was no rush to get the program started, that he should take all the time necessary to plan for potential addressees and careful consideration should be given to contemplated addressees before submitting the list for approval.

The Soviets recently have increased the cost of mailing packages to the USA by about 100 percent. AEREADY-2 feels it would cost about $150.00 now to make up a package of any significance. It was his opinion that by increasing the cost of mailing, the Soviets could slow down the flow of packages without decreasing the revenue obtained from the mailing agencies. He said the Soviets are obtaining huge sums of American dollars from the agencies and they do not wish to stop the flow of revenue. At the same time the Americans have profited propaganda-wise. Soviet propaganda teaches that the Americans are suffering from wide-spread unemployment, the poor working class being hard hit, yet there is no way to explain the ability of the poor unemployed to send such great quantities of food and clothing which the more fortunate Soviet citizens do not even see in their own stores.

9. AEREADY-2 submitted names of two biographical information on 3 hot war training candidates for consideration and contact (list attached). Two of the candidates are living in Brooklyn and 1 in Manhattan. AEREADY-2 stated he will obtain additional information on the candidates.

10. AEREADY-2 showed a copy of a letter to the undersigned which was addressed to the U.S. MAIL BOX SERVICE, 113 East 4th Street (AEREADY-2 stated this was a fictitious address). There was no signature on
