Source: From a fairly reliable source who has excellent contacts among Albanian refugees in Greece.

1. During the latter part of December 1952 [redacted] and Flqri Dine had a discussion about the establishment of a "Free Zone"  in Albania. When, in an indirect manner [redacted] sought Dine's opinions on the subject, Dine replied that it was a good idea but questioned whether the British would be willing to support such a move with money and material. [redacted] said that he could not answer this question, but he believed that the establishment of a "Free Zone" was certainly the only way to bring about the fall of the present government. Dine then said that if the British are interested in setting up a Free Zone they should call together Muharem Bajraktari, Nuci Kota, General Frenk Pervizi, Abas Kupi, Medhi Frasheri and Ali Klissura. Dine felt that these men, working together, could establish a "Free Zone," and when the Zone was established the British could set up any kind of government they wanted.

* Field Comment: [redacted] is the head of the Albanian Section of the British Intelligence Service office [redacted] Flqri Dine, a former Albanian Premier, is a pro-reg politician residing in Greece.

 Field Comment: By "Free Zone" [redacted] and Dine meant an area in Albania that would be held by resistance groups for a buildup to overthrow the regime.
