Excerpt of pertinent information :

The following is a condensation of a report of the political alignment of leading Rumanian exiles written by Gabriel Badarau, a close supporter of Grigore Gafencu. Badarau, at present, is a member of the Council of the International Education Bureau at Geneva. It indicates the difficulties experienced by emigre leaders in agreeing on their individual roles in coordinating their activities and politics with those of the opposition at home. . . .

7. After the Paris Peace Conference, the problem of organization revived with the arrival in the West of General Radescu (former Prime Minister), Constantin Visoianu, and Niculescu-Buzesti. All the leaders of Rumanian opposition abroad (except Gretsianu and Ratsin who could not take part, and General Radescu, who, not having a Swiss visa went instead to Annecy, France) met in Geneva at the home of Gafencu to exchange their views. . . .
