

3.5(c)

~~TOP SECRET~~

The National Intelligence Daily

3.5(c)

3.5(c)

Published by the Director of Central Intelligence for Named Principals Only
NR

Copy No. 178

MONDAY MARCH 29, 1976

VOLUME 3, NUMBER 74

ARGENTINA: General Jorge Videla this afternoon will be sworn in as president and an eight-man cabinet installed, culminating a smooth transition to military rule that appears to come as a relief to the Argentine public. For the moment, most citizens seem willing to grant the new government a honeymoon period.

Argentina: Swearing In

Argentine General Jorge Videla will be sworn in as president this afternoon, culminating an extraordinarily smooth transition to military rule.

The eight-man cabinet that will also be sworn in contains two officers from each of the three services and two civilians.

As expected, prominent industrialist and economist Jose Martinez de la Hoz will become minister of economy. Another civilian will take over the education portfolio. The foreign ministry will be in the hands of the military under Rear Admiral Cesar Guzzetti.

Guzzetti is relatively young and inexperienced in foreign affairs, suggesting that junta leaders intend to play a prominent role in foreign policy.

A tough army general and former federal police chief, Eduardo

Harguindeguy, will head the key interior ministry. He will be charged with the overall campaign against left-wing guerrillas and rightist vigilante squads.

The guerrillas have so far issued no public statement concerning the military takeover; only a few minor terrorist attacks have occurred since the coup. Guerrilla leaders probably are studying the military's security procedures and will hold off major actions until security precautions are relaxed.

Military authorities continue to issue decrees, most dealing with maintaining public order and getting the country back to work. One decree has banned strikes, work stoppages, and slowdowns.

Public reaction to the coup can best be characterized as one of relief. For the mo-
(See Argentina...Page 4)

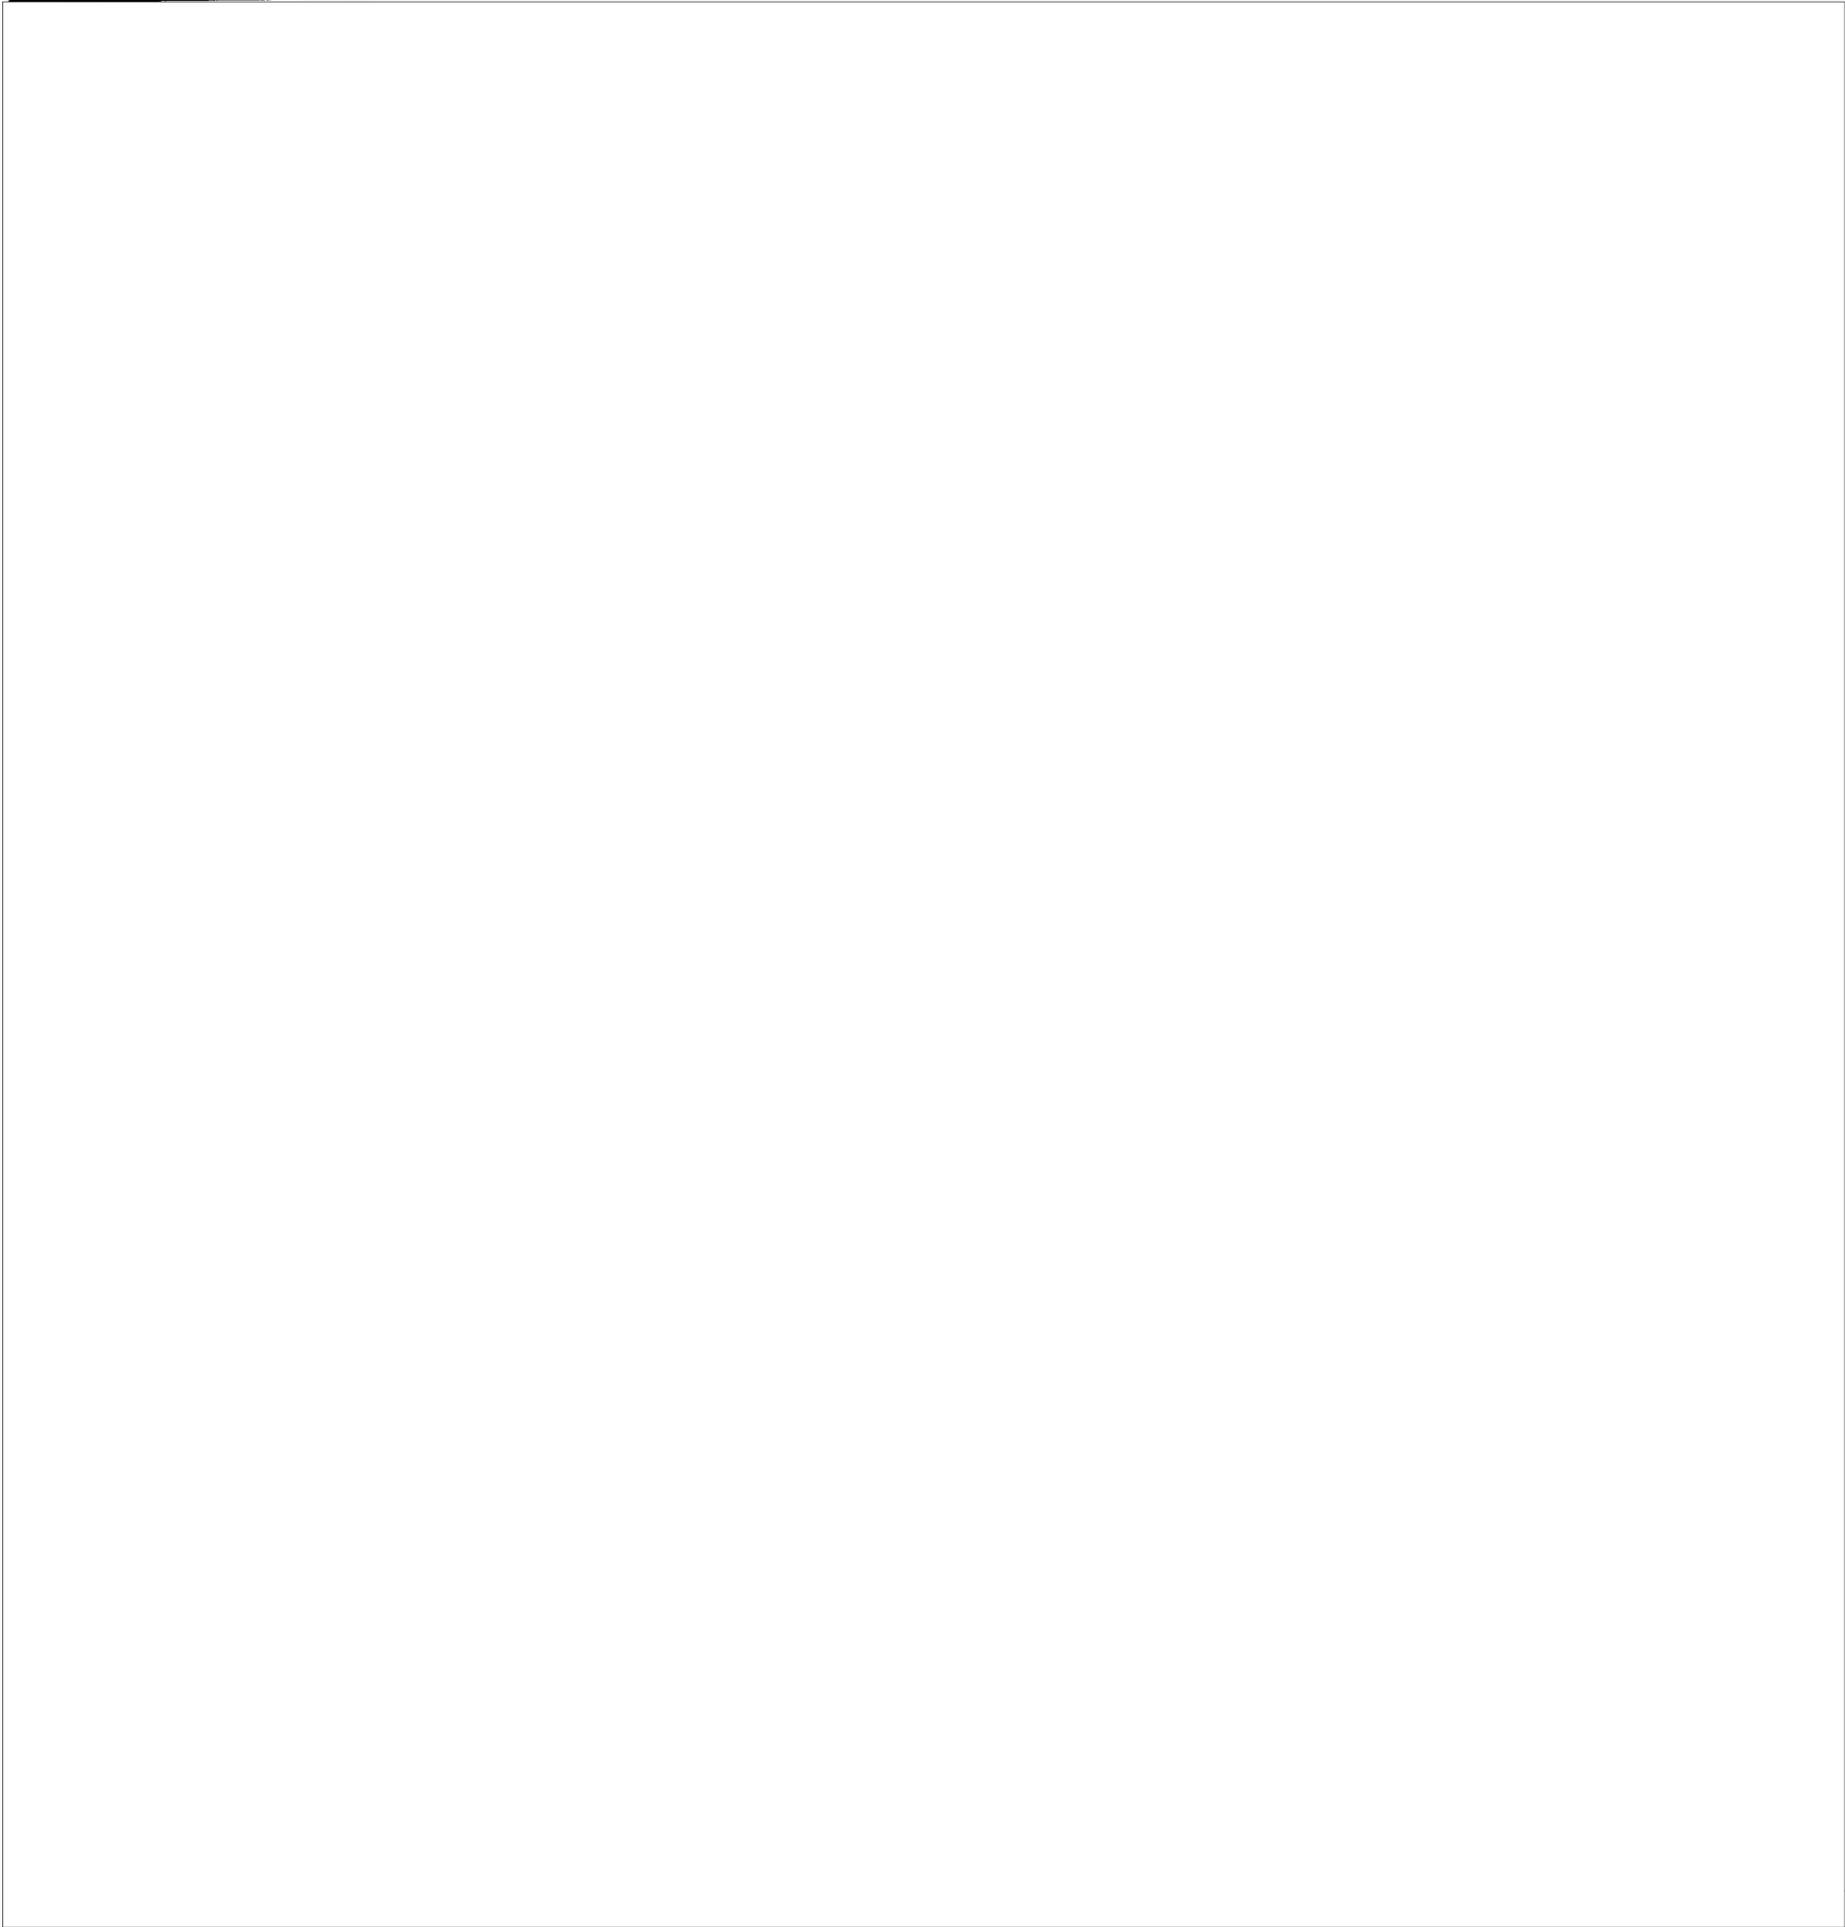

3.5(c)

~~TOP SECRET~~

Page Denied

Page Denied

~~TOP SECRET~~

Argentina. . .

From Page 1

ment, at least, most Argentines appear willing to grant the new government a honeymoon period. A respected Buenos Aires daily has noted an atmosphere of "enormous expectation" for the material and moral rehabilitation of the country.

The Videla government's first test may not be long in coming. The Peronist labor movement, although badly fragmented and leaderless, will be difficult to steer toward further belt-tightening. This is likely to be necessary, however, as the new economy minister is expected to announce severe austerity measures soon.