b)(1) are a visual symbol of gratitude for the sacrifice of those officers and their (kg)	Christmas and Happy New Year	Approved for Release: 2023/10/13 C06865794	(
(U) Merry Christmas and Happy New Year SECRET#/NOFORN Tam, (a) Earlier this month, we hosted the Agency's annual holiday reception for foreign liaison partners. It was a packed use as senior Agency officers mingled with foreign liaison partners, White House leaders, Ambassadors and others—sharing one commonality: they understand, support and contribute to the CIA's mission. (b) A few days later, Susan and I enjoyed an afternoon talking and taking photos with members of our workforce—and are wowed by your holiday spirit. Many of you wore battery-powered light up sweaters, Christmas kilts, one aristmas penguin suit with bow tie, musical necklacesSusan and I will have to up our game next year! (c) At the workforce reception, we distributed a card sharing my mother's secret fudge recipe. Mom gifted her fudge dely every Christmas—to all our teachers, neighbors and friends—and my reward for stirring each of her recipes (no hall task) was an extra stash of fudge! Scroll to the bottom of this note to see the recipe card. (c) As I write this, we are in the process of sending the 2017 CIA holiday card to Agency friends around the world, his year's card honors holiday family memories and traditions, along with the memories that we all share as we lebrate the 70th birthday of the Central Intelligence Agency. Scroll down a bit further in this email so you can see this ar's Agency holiday card. (d) NF) Last fall at the Agency's Family Day, officers and their children wrote notes of thanks and holiday greetings on instruction paper strips. The strips were stapled together and hundreds of feet of paper chains were created and imped off to our stations around the world. These paper chains, now decorating our offices (to b) (1) are a visual symbol of gratitude for the sacrifice of those officers and their
(U) Merry Christmas and Happy New Year SECRET#/NOFORN Tam, (a) Earlier this month, we hosted the Agency's annual holiday reception for foreign liaison partners. It was a packed use as senior Agency officers mingled with foreign liaison partners, White House leaders, Ambassadors and others—sharing one commonality: they understand, support and contribute to the CIA's mission. (b) A few days later, Susan and I enjoyed an afternoon talking and taking photos with members of our workforce—and are wowed by your holiday spirit. Many of you wore battery-powered light up sweaters, Christmas kilts, one aristmas penguin suit with bow tie, musical necklacesSusan and I will have to up our game next year! (c) At the workforce reception, we distributed a card sharing my mother's secret fudge recipe. Mom gifted her fudge dely every Christmas—to all our teachers, neighbors and friends—and my reward for stirring each of her recipes (no hall task) was an extra stash of fudge! Scroll to the bottom of this note to see the recipe card. (c) As I write this, we are in the process of sending the 2017 CIA holiday card to Agency friends around the world, his year's card honors holiday family memories and traditions, along with the memories that we all share as we lebrate the 70th birthday of the Central Intelligence Agency. Scroll down a bit further in this email so you can see this ar's Agency holiday card. (d) NF) Last fall at the Agency's Family Day, officers and their children wrote notes of thanks and holiday greetings on instruction paper strips. The strips were stapled together and hundreds of feet of paper chains were created and imped off to our stations around the world. These paper chains, now decorating our offices (to b) (1) are a visual symbol of gratitude for the sacrifice of those officers and their
(U) Merry Christmas and Happy New Year SECRET#/NOFORN Tam, (a) Earlier this month, we hosted the Agency's annual holiday reception for foreign liaison partners. It was a packed use as senior Agency officers mingled with foreign liaison partners, White House leaders, Ambassadors and others—sharing one commonality: they understand, support and contribute to the CIA's mission. (b) A few days later, Susan and I enjoyed an afternoon talking and taking photos with members of our workforce—and are wowed by your holiday spirit. Many of you wore battery-powered light up sweaters, Christmas kilts, one aristmas penguin suit with bow tie, musical necklacesSusan and I will have to up our game next year! (c) At the workforce reception, we distributed a card sharing my mother's secret fudge recipe. Mom gifted her fudge dely every Christmas—to all our teachers, neighbors and friends—and my reward for stirring each of her recipes (no hall task) was an extra stash of fudge! Scroll to the bottom of this note to see the recipe card. (c) As I write this, we are in the process of sending the 2017 CIA holiday card to Agency friends around the world, his year's card honors holiday family memories and traditions, along with the memories that we all share as we lebrate the 70th birthday of the Central Intelligence Agency. Scroll down a bit further in this email so you can see this ar's Agency holiday card. (d) NF) Last fall at the Agency's Family Day, officers and their children wrote notes of thanks and holiday greetings on instruction paper strips. The strips were stapled together and hundreds of feet of paper chains were created and imped off to our stations around the world. These paper chains, now decorating our offices (to b) (1) are a visual symbol of gratitude for the sacrifice of those officers and their
(U) Merry Christmas and Happy New Year SECRET#/NOFORN Tam, (a) Earlier this month, we hosted the Agency's annual holiday reception for foreign liaison partners. It was a packed use as senior Agency officers mingled with foreign liaison partners, White House leaders, Ambassadors and others—sharing one commonality: they understand, support and contribute to the CIA's mission. (b) A few days later, Susan and I enjoyed an afternoon talking and taking photos with members of our workforce—and are wowed by your holiday spirit. Many of you wore battery-powered light up sweaters, Christmas kilts, one aristmas penguin suit with bow tie, musical necklacesSusan and I will have to up our game next year! (c) At the workforce reception, we distributed a card sharing my mother's secret fudge recipe. Mom gifted her fudge dely every Christmas—to all our teachers, neighbors and friends—and my reward for stirring each of her recipes (no hall task) was an extra stash of fudge! Scroll to the bottom of this note to see the recipe card. (c) As I write this, we are in the process of sending the 2017 CIA holiday card to Agency friends around the world, his year's card honors holiday family memories and traditions, along with the memories that we all share as we lebrate the 70th birthday of the Central Intelligence Agency. Scroll down a bit further in this email so you can see this ar's Agency holiday card. (d) NF) Last fall at the Agency's Family Day, officers and their children wrote notes of thanks and holiday greetings on instruction paper strips. The strips were stapled together and hundreds of feet of paper chains were created and imped off to our stations around the world. These paper chains, now decorating our offices (to b) (1) are a visual symbol of gratitude for the sacrifice of those officers and their	(h)(2)
SECRET//NOFORN Sam, (b) Earlier this month, we hosted the Agency's annual holiday reception for foreign liaison partners. It was a packed buse as senior Agency officers mingled with foreign liaison partners, White House leaders, Ambassadors and others—sharing one commonality: they understand, support and contribute to the CIA's mission. (c) A few days later, Susan and I enjoyed an afternoon talking and taking photos with members of our workforce—and are wowed by your holiday spirit. Many of you wore battery-powered light up sweaters, Christmas kilts, one aristmas penguin suit with bow tie, musical necklacesSusan and I will have to up our game next year! (c) At the workforce reception, we distributed a card sharing my mother's secret fudge recipe. Mom gifted her fudge dely every Christmas—to all our teachers, neighbors and friends—and my reward for stirring each of her recipes (no hall task) was an extra stash of fudge! Scroll to the bottom of this note to see the recipe card. (d) As I write this, we are in the process of sending the 2017 CIA holiday card to Agency friends around the world his year's card honors holiday family memories and traditions, along with the memories that we all share as we lebrate the 70th birthday of the Central Intelligence Agency. Scroll down a bit further in this email so you can see this ar's Agency holiday card. (NF) Last fall at the Agency's Family Day, officers and their children wrote notes of thanks and holiday greetings on instruction paper strips. The strips were stapled together and hundreds of feet of paper chains were created and imped off to our stations around the world. These paper chains, now decorating our offices (d) (d) (d) (d) (d) (d) (d) (d		☐ DECEMBER 19, 2017
SECRET//NOFORN Sam, (b) Earlier this month, we hosted the Agency's annual holiday reception for foreign liaison partners. It was a packed buse as senior Agency officers mingled with foreign liaison partners, White House leaders, Ambassadors and others—sharing one commonality: they understand, support and contribute to the CIA's mission. (c) A few days later, Susan and I enjoyed an afternoon talking and taking photos with members of our workforce—and are wowed by your holiday spirit. Many of you wore battery-powered light up sweaters, Christmas kilts, one aristmas penguin suit with bow tie, musical necklacesSusan and I will have to up our game next year! (c) At the workforce reception, we distributed a card sharing my mother's secret fudge recipe. Mom gifted her fudge dely every Christmas—to all our teachers, neighbors and friends—and my reward for stirring each of her recipes (no hall task) was an extra stash of fudge! Scroll to the bottom of this note to see the recipe card. (d) As I write this, we are in the process of sending the 2017 CIA holiday card to Agency friends around the world his year's card honors holiday family memories and traditions, along with the memories that we all share as we lebrate the 70th birthday of the Central Intelligence Agency. Scroll down a bit further in this email so you can see this ar's Agency holiday card. (NF) Last fall at the Agency's Family Day, officers and their children wrote notes of thanks and holiday greetings on instruction paper strips. The strips were stapled together and hundreds of feet of paper chains were created and imped off to our stations around the world. These paper chains, now decorating our offices (d) (d) (d) (d) (d) (d) (d) (d	(II) Morry	Christmas and Hanny New Vear
Earlier this month, we hosted the Agency's annual holiday reception for foreign liaison partners. It was a packed use as senior Agency officers mingled with foreign liaison partners, White House leaders, Ambassadors and others—sharing one commonality: they understand, support and contribute to the CIA's mission. (a) A few days later, Susan and I enjoyed an afternoon talking and taking photos with members of our workforce—and are wowed by your holiday spirit. Many of you wore battery-powered light up sweaters, Christmas kilts, one paristmas penguin suit with bow tie, musical necklacesSusan and I will have to up our game next year! (b) At the workforce reception, we distributed a card sharing my mother's secret fudge recipe. Mom gifted her fudge dely every Christmas—to all our teachers, neighbors and friends—and my reward for stirring each of her recipes (no hall task) was an extra stash of fudge! Scroll to the bottom of this note to see the recipe card. (b) As I write this, we are in the process of sending the 2017 CIA holiday card to Agency friends around the world. his year's card honors holiday family memories and traditions, along with the memories that we all share as we lebrate the 70th birthday of the Central Intelligence Agency. Scroll down a bit further in this email so you can see this ar's Agency holiday card. (c) As I at the Agency's Family Day, officers and their children wrote notes of thanks and holiday greetings on instruction paper strips. The strips were stapled together and hundreds of feet of paper chains were created and ipped off to our stations around the world. These paper chains, now decorating our offices to book officers and their children wrote of those officers and their children wrote of these officers and their children wrote of those officers and their children wrote of these officers and their children w	(O) Melly
Earlier this month, we hosted the Agency's annual holiday reception for foreign liaison partners. It was a packed use as senior Agency officers mingled with foreign liaison partners, White House leaders, Ambassadors and others—sharing one commonality: they understand, support and contribute to the CIA's mission. (a) A few days later, Susan and I enjoyed an afternoon talking and taking photos with members of our workforce—and are wowed by your holiday spirit. Many of you wore battery-powered light up sweaters, Christmas kilts, one paristmas penguin suit with bow tie, musical necklacesSusan and I will have to up our game next year! (b) At the workforce reception, we distributed a card sharing my mother's secret fudge recipe. Mom gifted her fudge dely every Christmas—to all our teachers, neighbors and friends—and my reward for stirring each of her recipes (no hall task) was an extra stash of fudge! Scroll to the bottom of this note to see the recipe card. (b) As I write this, we are in the process of sending the 2017 CIA holiday card to Agency friends around the world. his year's card honors holiday family memories and traditions, along with the memories that we all share as we lebrate the 70th birthday of the Central Intelligence Agency. Scroll down a bit further in this email so you can see this ar's Agency holiday card. (c) As I at the Agency's Family Day, officers and their children wrote notes of thanks and holiday greetings on instruction paper strips. The strips were stapled together and hundreds of feet of paper chains were created and ipped off to our stations around the world. These paper chains, now decorating our offices to book officers and their children wrote of those officers and their children wrote of these officers and their children wrote of those officers and their children wrote of these officers and their children w sharing one commonality: they understand, support and contribute to the CIA's mission. (1) A few days later, Susan and I enjoyed an afternoon talking and taking photos with members of our workforce—and are wowed by your holiday spirit. Many of you wore battery-powered light up sweaters, Christmas kilts, one pristmas penguin suit with bow tie, musical necklacesSusan and I will have to up our game next year! (2) At the workforce reception, we distributed a card sharing my mother's secret fudge recipe. Mom gifted her fudge dely every Christmas—to all our teachers, neighbors and friends—and my reward for stirring each of her recipes (no hall task) was an extra stash of fudge! Scroll to the bottom of this note to see the recipe card. (3) As I write this, we are in the process of sending the 2017 CIA holiday card to Agency friends around the world. his year's card honors holiday family memories and traditions, along with the memories that we all share as we lebrate the 70th birthday of the Central Intelligence Agency. Scroll down a bit further in this email so you can see this ar's Agency holiday card. (A) As I strips were stapled together and hundreds of feet of paper chains were created and inped off to our stations around the world. These paper chains, now decorating our offices by (1) are a visual symbol of gratitude for the sacrifice of those officers and their	eam, sharing one commonality: they understand, support and contribute to the CIA's mission. (a) A few days later, Susan and I enjoyed an afternoon talking and taking photos with members of our workforce—and the envistmas penguin suit with bow tie, musical necklaces Susan and I will have to up our game next year! (b) At the workforce reception, we distributed a card sharing my mother's secret fudge recipe. Mom gifted her fudge dely every Christmas—to all our teachers, neighbors and friends—and my reward for stirring each of her recipes (no hall task) was an extra stash of fudge! Scroll to the bottom of this note to see the recipe card. (c) As I write this, we are in the process of sending the 2017 CIA holiday card to Agency friends around the world. his year's card honors holiday family memories and traditions, along with the memories that we all share as we lebrate the 70th birthday of the Central Intelligence Agency. Scroll down a bit further in this email so you can see this ar's Agency holiday card. (c) As I write this, we are in the process of sending the 2017 CIA holiday card to Agency friends around the world. In the process of the control of the con ere wowed by your holiday spirit. Many of you wore battery-powered light up sweaters, Christmas kilts, one pristmas penguin suit with bow tie, musical necklacesSusan and I will have to up our game next year! At the workforce reception, we distributed a card sharing my mother's secret fudge recipe. Mom gifted her fudge dely every Christmas—to all our teachers, neighbors and friends—and my reward for stirring each of her recipes (no nall task) was an extra stash of fudge! Scroll to the bottom of this note to see the recipe card. As I write this, we are in the process of sending the 2017 CIA holiday card to Agency friends around the world. This year's card honors holiday family memories and traditions, along with the memories that we all share as we debrate the 70th birthday of the Central Intelligence Agency. Scroll down a bit further in this email so you can see this ar's Agency holiday card. NF) Last fall at the Agency's Family Day, officers and their children wrote notes of thanks and holiday greetings on instruction paper strips. The strips were stapled together and hundreds of feet of paper chains were created and inped off to our stations around the world. These paper chains, now decorating our offices (to the control of the secretic of those officers and their children wrote notes of those officers and their children wrote notes of those officers and their children wrote notes of the secretic of the secretic of the secretic of those officers and their children wrote notes of the secretic of the secretic of these officers and their children wrote notes of the secretic of t
At the workforce reception, we distributed a card sharing my mother's secret fudge recipe. Mom gifted her fudge dely every Christmas—to all our teachers, neighbors and friends—and my reward for stirring each of her recipes (no nall task) was an extra stash of fudge! Scroll to the bottom of this note to see the recipe card. (1) As I write this, we are in the process of sending the 2017 CIA holiday card to Agency friends around the world. This year's card honors holiday family memories and traditions, along with the memories that we all share as we lebrate the 70th birthday of the Central Intelligence Agency. Scroll down a bit further in this email so you can see this ar's Agency holiday card. (NF) Last fall at the Agency's Family Day, officers and their children wrote notes of thanks and holiday greetings on instruction paper strips. The strips were stapled together and hundreds of feet of paper chains were created and inped off to our stations around the world. These paper chains, now decorating our offices (k) (1) (1) (1) (1) (1) (1) (1)			-and dely every Christmas—to all our teachers, neighbors and friends—and my reward for stirring each of her recipes (no nall task) was an extra stash of fudge! Scroll to the bottom of this note to see the recipe card. (1) As I write this, we are in the process of sending the 2017 CIA holiday card to Agency friends around the world. This year's card honors holiday family memories and traditions, along with the memories that we all share as we lebrate the 70th birthday of the Central Intelligence Agency. Scroll down a bit further in this email so you can see this ar's Agency holiday card. (NF) Last fall at the Agency's Family Day, officers and their children wrote notes of thanks and holiday greetings on instruction paper strips. The strips were stapled together and hundreds of feet of paper chains were created and ipped off to our stations around the world. These paper chains, now decorating our offices (1) (1) are a visual symbol of gratitude for the sacrifice of those officers and their	• •
dely every Christmas—to all our teachers, neighbors and friends—and my reward for stirring each of her recipes (no nall task) was an extra stash of fudge! Scroll to the bottom of this note to see the recipe card. (1) As I write this, we are in the process of sending the 2017 CIA holiday card to Agency friends around the world. This year's card honors holiday family memories and traditions, along with the memories that we all share as we lebrate the 70th birthday of the Central Intelligence Agency. Scroll down a bit further in this email so you can see this ar's Agency holiday card. (NF) Last fall at the Agency's Family Day, officers and their children wrote notes of thanks and holiday greetings on instruction paper strips. The strips were stapled together and hundreds of feet of paper chains were created and ipped off to our stations around the world. These paper chains, now decorating our offices (1) (1) are a visual symbol of gratitude for the sacrifice of those officers and their
As I write this, we are in the process of sending the 2017 CIA holiday card to Agency friends around the world. his year's card honors holiday family memories and traditions, along with the memories that we all share as we lebrate the 70th birthday of the Central Intelligence Agency. Scroll down a bit further in this email so you can see this ar's Agency holiday card. //NF) Last fall at the Agency's Family Day, officers and their children wrote notes of thanks and holiday greetings on instruction paper strips. The strips were stapled together and hundreds of feet of paper chains were created and ipped off to our stations around the world. These paper chains, now decorating our offices (kb)(1) are a visual symbol of gratitude for the sacrifice of those officers and their	, his year's card honors holiday family memories and traditions, along with the memories that we all share as we lebrate the 70th birthday of the Central Intelligence Agency. Scroll down a bit further in this email so you can see this ar's Agency holiday card. //NF) Last fall at the Agency's Family Day, officers and their children wrote notes of thanks and holiday greetings on instruction paper strips. The strips were stapled together and hundreds of feet of paper chains were created and ipped off to our stations around the world. These paper chains, now decorating our offices (to 1) are a visual symbol of gratitude for the sacrifice of those officers and their	nall task) was an extra sta	sh of fudge! Scroll to the bottom of this note to see the recipe card.
lebrate the 70th birthday of the Central Intelligence Agency. Scroll down a bit further in this email so you can see this ar's Agency holiday card. //NF) Last fall at the Agency's Family Day, officers and their children wrote notes of thanks and holiday greetings on instruction paper strips. The strips were stapled together and hundreds of feet of paper chains were created and ipped off to our stations around the world. These paper chains, now decorating our offices (the b)(1) are a visual symbol of gratitude for the sacrifice of those officers and their	J) As I write this, we are	n the process of sending the 2017 CIA holiday card to Agency friends around the world. ar's Agency holiday card. //NF) Last fall at the Agency's Family Day, officers and their children wrote notes of thanks and holiday greetings on instruction paper strips. The strips were stapled together and hundreds of feet of paper chains were created and ipped off to our stations around the world. These paper chains, now decorating our offices (t) (t) (t) (t)	• nstruction paper strips. The strips were stapled together and hundreds of feet of paper chains were created and ipped off to our stations around the world. These paper chains, now decorating our offices (kb)(1) are a visual symbol of gratitude for the sacrifice of those officers and their	•		this ipped off to our stations around the world. These paper chains, now decorating our offices (kb)(1) are a visual symbol of gratitude for the sacrifice of those officers and their	S//NF) Last fall at the Ago	ncy's Family Day, officers and their children wrote notes of thanks and holiday greeting	s on
b)(1) are a visual symbol of gratitude for the sacrifice of those officers and their (kg)		• • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • are a visual symbol of grantide for the sacrifice of those officers and then			(b (b رارغ) الارازغ	(b)(1) (b)(3)	are a visual symbol of gratitude for the sacrifice of those officers and their	,~

erica. ily and
erbread
ł

