How about asking a few recent college grad EODs where they were when they found out about the UBL raid and whether that inspired them to careers in intel? We're at the mark where some of those kids were seniors in high school when this happened. Could be a nice internal story. Sorry this is not as cool as your idea...but could be part of a larger effort...

Ok I am softening a bit on the raid tweet business. We'd have to do it in real time...from helo takeoff in Afghanistan to return. Tweets would come out at the moments and intervals they happened five years before...with key moments noted... I don't know if there is a declassified timeline with that sort of detail. Just a factual this happened with a good hashtag...

Also for the 15 year anniversary of the first in we should ask [redacted] if there are some more docs or maps or photos we can declassify. We probably need to start now.
