

17 February 1948

MEMORANDUM FOR RECORD;

[Redacted] 4

OGA

On 16 February 1948 at 1400 hours, Lieut. Colonel E. J. Treacy of G-2, Department of the Army, arrived at this office with an "Eyes Only" message addressed to Admiral Hillenkoetter. The Admiral being away at the time, Col. Treacy was asked if he would process the message to me as the Admiral's Deputy. Col. Treacy said he was obliged to refuse since had been directed to show the message only to the Admiral. It was suggested he call ID and see if they would permit him to show the message to me. He made the call and was informed that he would not deliver the message.

After Col. Treacy's departure I called Major General Alex Bolling, Deputy Director of Army Intelligence, and informed him of the incident. I told General Bolling that if the message was of a personal interest to the Admiral it was of course properly handled. However, if it was of intelligence value, it established a dangerous precedent if the Director's Deputy was not given the information in the absence of the Director. General Bolling said the message was of intelligence interest and was from General [Redacted]. He said the matter had been handled in poor fashion and that the message should have been shown me. This occurred at 1545 hours.

General Bolling continued to say that he would have the message sent over to me immediately. I waited in my office until 1720 but the message was not delivered. As of 1345 hours, this date, 17 February 1948, the message has still not been delivered to either the Director or myself.

The purpose of this Memo for the Record is to call attention to another instance when intelligence material of one of the departments does not flow into CIA.
