ICCS Reported Near Collapse

SAIGON, Sept. 18 (AP)—The peacekeeping commission in South Vietnam is in danger of collapse unless it receives funds to pay off its debts in a week, authoritative sources said today.

According to the informants, the four-nation International Commission of Control and Supervision has already drawn up a plan to withdraw its cease-fire teams from the field by next Wednesday because of the financial crisis.

The problem stems in part from the refusal of North Vietnam and the Vietcong to pay their share, the sources said.

The plan for ICCS withdrawal was drawn up because of a decision by the Pacific Architects and Engineers, Inc., one of two major contracting firms serving the ICCS, to discontinue its logistics services unless the commission pays its bills, the sources said.

The commission, composed of Iran, Indonesia, Hungary and Poland, is about $5 million to $6 million in the red, with about $2 million of this owed to the contracting firm, the sources added.

The North Vietnamese and Vietcong delegations in Saigon were not immediately available for comment, but the sources said they had not approved the current budget and were under orders from Hanoi not to contribute any money until the United States starts providing economic aid to Hanoi.

While the commission has so far been unable to implement most of its major missions, except for supervision of U.S. troop withdrawal and prisoner exchange, experts say the presence of the observers in the field tends to restrain major military violations of the cease-fire accords.

Hanoi to Provide Laos $3 Million in Aid

Agence France-Presse

VIENTIANE, Sept. 18 — North Vietnam signed an aid agreement today with the five-month-old Laos coalition under which Hanoi pledged to donate $3 million worth of rice, cement, foodstuffs and pharmaceutical products, informed sources said here.

The agreement also covers the rebuilding of Route 7 from central north Laos to the North Vietnamese coast, restoring it as an alternative access to the sea for Laos. Since the French Indochina war the
