

If we are to avoid future shocks in the competitive scientific and military race, it is important that we should be more farsighted in our planning and seize upon the essentials before others have shown us the potentialities of scientific developments.