Mystery Makes Life More Interesting

Well, we see that the House Space Committee is planning another investigation of the UFO (Unidentified Flying Objects) mystery. We can't say we are greatly stirred by this development. Yet, curiosity will prevent us from ignoring whatever developments may turn up.

Officially, the Air Force has been insisting for years that there is no mystery about the mystery. The UFO's, they contend, are simply meteors, weather balloons, plants and such.

Still, the Air Force can't prove its case because UFO's don't stay long enough to be positively identified. They are long gone before there can be a scientific, on-the-spot verdict.

Several prominent people are not satisfied with the Air Force stand. They include Admiral R. H. Hillenkoetter, former chief of the Central Intelligence Agency, Senator Barry Goldwater and House Speaker John W. McCormack.

So, we say, get on with the UFO inquiry. We'll be listening. Next to a whodunnit, there's nothing like a what-wasit.
