He's Good Soldier at 3

Hero's Son Gets Pat On Back From Ike

By Dorothy McCardle

THE mysterious goings-on at the Central Intelligence Agency here are to be privy to the world shortly when three articles, authored by a Washington husband and wife writing team, appear in a national magazine (Saturday Evening Post, starting October 30).

Gladys and Richard Harkness spent a year trying to find out the lowdown on Uncle Sam's international spy organization. "Daz" did most of the research and interviewing since she had more time than her radio-TV commentator husband. But they took turns writing and rewriting each other's drafts of the manuscript.

So concentrated had Mrs. Harkness been working at their Georgetown home that when the articles had been accepted, her three sons remarked whimsically:

"Mother, it's so nice to have you back with us again."
