

PAUL BOREL

Paul A. Borel, an engineering and mining consultant from Kansas City, has been named deputy assistant director of the Office of National Estimates of the Central Intelligence Agency. Mr. Borel has been engaged in intelligence since shortly after the war. During World War II he served in the Navy and in 1945 attended the Potsdam conference as a naval representative.

Before entering the Navy, Mr. Borel was associated with the Phillips Petroleum Company in Oklahoma and Texas, Black and Veatch, consulting engineers in Kansas City, and the Sun Oil Company in Toledo, Ohio. He was commissioned an ensign in the Naval Reserve in 1940 and separated from the service as a commander in 1946. He participated in the Normandy invasion and in November 1944 was named chief staff officer for the naval component of the SHAEF mission to the Netherlands. In 1946 he attended the Paris Conference as assistant to the naval advisor to the Secretary of State.

Born in Zurich, Switzerland on March 15, 1912, Mr. Borel was educated in Kansas City schools and received his B.S. in chemical engineering from the University of Kansas in 1934. Other degrees include the M.B.A. from the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration in 1938; M.A., Columbia University, 1944; and LL.B., George Washington University, 1951. He was graduated from the National War College in 1950.

Married to the former Miriam Eleanor Chesham of Minneapolis, he has five children and makes his home in Fairfax County, Virginia. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jules Borel, live at 5129 Clark Drive, Kansas City, Kansas.
