She didn't want to wait a year and a half to get married, so the Beverly Taylor admitted in Supreme Court, so she gave her suitor, a dashing "CIA pilot," $100,340 to get out of debt—and wound up still single and more than a 100 grand lighter.

Miss Taylor, of 136 E. 76th St., who is in the Social Register with other members of her family, complained to the court yesterday that her beau, James C. Pollock, of 118 E. Front St., Lansford, Pa., made "false representations" to her when he told her:

He was employed by the Central Intelligence Agency, and he wanted to marry her.

Made Big Investment

He was $100.00 in debt from his investment in the Pocono International Raceway.

He had notified the CIA he intended to marry and would leave the agency in December.

Miss Taylor's attorney, Abraham L. Bienstock, already has obtained a writ of attachment from Justice George S. Carney so that the sheriff may attach any of Pollock's property in this jurisdiction. The lawyer is suing for the return of the $100,340 for his client.

Met Six Weeks Ago

In Miss Taylor's petition for the writ, she said she met Pollock about six weeks ago and "shortly thereafter he proposed marriage to me but informed me he was unable to marry me until he disposed of substantial debts.

He suggested that if I would lend the money to him to take care of these debts he would be able to marry me in December. Otherwise it would be necessary to put off the marriage for at least a year."

Sold Securities

"I was reluctant to make the loan," Miss Taylor said, "but since I was unwilling to wait for a year and a half I decided to sell securities I owned . . ." On July 29, she said, she gave Pollock a check for $100,340.

Since then, Miss Taylor asserted, Pollock has refused to give her a promissory note or to return the money. She discovered, she said, "he had no intention whatsoever to marry me and that all his representations were made in order to induce me to transfer funds to him."
