other requests to [] prior to his departure from the building, such as information on the political dynamics at work in Chile at the time and the role of the Soviet Union in the Chilean political process.

The Director called ex-Ambassador Korry's attention to the Freedom of Information Act wherein he as well as other American citizens could request information from the Agency. Ex-Ambassador Korry was not aware of the act; he indicated that much of what he was seeking could be acquired through conversations with knowledgeable people in the Agency. The Director said that the Agency would be as helpful as it could in ex-Ambassador Korry's endeavor.
