Abstract

The purpose of this study was to determine whether there were differences in the prevalence of risk factors for coronary artery disease between two groups of men who had been exposed to asbestos during their working lives. The subjects were divided into two groups based on the duration of exposure to asbestos: those with less than 10 years of exposure ($n = 67$) and those with more than 10 years of exposure ($n = 89$). The prevalence of risk factors for coronary artery disease was determined by questionnaire and physical examination. The results showed that the prevalence of risk factors for coronary artery disease was significantly higher in the group with more than 10 years of exposure to asbestos compared to the group with less than 10 years of exposure. These findings suggest that prolonged exposure to asbestos may be associated with an increased risk of developing coronary artery disease.
