MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

SUBJECT: Briefing on Southern Africa for Members of the House International Relations Committee, March 18, 1976

- l. Representative Bonker (D.-Wash.) had requested this briefing with the understanding he would invite other members of the full Committee to attend. We agreed so long as it was understood that this was a background briefing for the members and not attributable to the Agency. The briefing was held in Representative Bingham's (D.-N.Y.) office. Although originally it had been suggested we confine ourselves to about half an hour, questions from members continued after the appointed time and we were there for well over an hour.
- The members attending ranged completely across the Committee's political spectrum. In addition to Representatives ·Bingham and Bonker, we had Messrs. Fraser, Carr, Dellums, Dent, Harrington, Biester, Bedell, Diggs, and Congresswomen Meyner, and Fenwick. One Committee staffer, Leslie Yates, attended a portion of the briefing. I began with a general current intelligence picture of the situation as we saw it in Southern Africa. This included a brief rundown on Angola, Rhodesia, Zambia, and South Africa. I discussed in some detail the status of negotiations between Ian Smith and Rhodesian Nationalist leader Nkomo. I told the members that much of what was going to transpire in Southern Africa over the next six months depended on these negotiations and a black majority government in Rhodesia. I said that, quite frankly, we saw little prospect that Smith would actually agree to such a government within a time frame which would be acceptable to the nationalists.

- I described the various insurgent groups that would play a role in Rhodesia and discussed their backing by China and the USSR. There were, as anticipated, many questions about the Cuban role. I replied that the Cubans were riding the crest of their success in Angola and without question would like to support other liberation movements. however, was the real key as the Cubans would find it difficult to operate without support from the Soviet Union. I also said that both Havana and Moscow would have to take into consideration the views of Mozambique, Tanzania, and Zambia and they could not afford to get out ahead of the Africans themselves. In connection with this I noted our feeling that the presidents of the three African nations most directly involved did not, at this time, really want massive infusions of Cubans. I added that this attitude might change, however, if there seemed to be no progress in Rhodesia over the next six months or a year.
- We discussed the South African position and why Pretoria was pushing Smith to the negotiating table. There were questions about the impact on Rhodesia of Mozambique's border closure and I replied that the South African's probably could handle Rhodesia's import-export shipments without undue strain.
- There were the usual questions about US policy to which we gave the usual response--the question is best addressed to the State Department -- and one from Representative Diggs asking if we had an intelligence liaison relationship with Rhodesia and South Africa. I replied that we had intelligence liaison relationships with many countries, but that I really was not qualified to answer that question specifically. We also had the anticipated question about covert action programs and again the response that I just was not the person to answer.
- In general, the group was polite and seemed to be interested primarily in getting information, not in scoring
