

15a - a very professional report. Reminds me of that passage from Shakespeare - "a speech full of sound and fury signifying NOTHING". He got an idea then proceeded to justify it by dreaming up "Hypotheses". Only problem is that he is all wet in his basic approach - I don't think very much of his "clinical judgement". I would NOT recommend spending any more money for this guy's conclusions - I would however still like to get a readable copy of the actual test scores.

This is exactly the type of "professional" we do not need on a project like this. He has already made up his mind in advance and would not recognize a new piece of data if it bit him -
