		ROUTING	DATE	INUTIALS			1 (op Se	ecret	6
0: 1	NAME AND A	DDRESS	DATE	INITIALS		-	(Secu	rity Clas	ssification in the state of the	on)
2
3					CONT	rol no
AC		DIRECT REPLY DISPATCH	RECO	ARE REPLY MMENDATION			ĸÌ
C01)MMENT [FILE INFORMATION	RETUI SIGNA	RN		H. 1
F	FROM: NAME, ADD	RESS, AND PHONI	E NO.	DATE
		Access	s to this	s document v	will be res	tricted to	0
		those app	roved f	s document voor the followed in the contract of the contract o	ring speci	fic activ	ities: LE	3C
		those approximation (NATIO) Friday	roved f	or the follow OTELLIGEN	ring speci	fic activ	ities: LE	3C
DIA	review(s) com	those approximation (NATIO) Friday	roved f	or the follow OTELLIGEN	ring speci	fic activ	ities: LE	3C
	review(s) com	those apply NATIO Friday	roved f	or the follow OTELLIGEN	ring speci	fic activ	ities: LE	3C
State		those application in the second secon	roved f	or the follow OTELLIGEN	ring speci	fic activ	ities: LE	3C
State	Dept. review c	those application in the second secon	roved f	or the follow OTELLIGEN	ring speci	fic activ	ities: LE	3C
tate	Dept. review c	those application in the second secon	roved f	or the follow TOTELLIGEN	ring speci	fic activ	ities:		ecret

25X1 National Intelligence Daily Cable for Friday, 21 April 1978.

The NID Cable is for the purpose of informing senior US officials.

25X1

CONTENTS

			25X1
CHINA: Senkaku Islands Incident	Page	3
NAMIBIA: Security Proclamation	Page	4
NIGERIA: Domestic Problems	Page	6
CHAD: French Reinforcements	Page	7	_
			25X1
CHINA: Patents and Trademarks	Page	9
CHINA: New Grain Purchases	Page	9
			25X1
PAKISTAN: Opium Production	Page	11	•
BELGIUM: Political Turmoil	Page	12
BRIEFS:	Page	13
Nicaraqua Angola

25X1

CHINA: Senkaku Islands Incident

25X1

25X1

25X1

25X1

Incursions by Chinese fishing vessels into Japanese-claimed waters around the disputed Senkaku Islands have stirred a strong public reaction in Japan and raised questions about China's motives and tactics. The action has added another roadblock to the chances for early progress on the Sino-Japanese Peace and Friendship Treaty. Peking apparently made the move in order to demonstrate both its claim to the islands and its opposition to any linkage of the Senkaku issue with the treaty. Peking may also have hoped to influence Japanese legislation that would implement the Japanese - South Korean continental shelf treaty; this treaty deals with oil prospecting in other areas claimed by China.

The incursions began on 12 April when several Chinese fishing boats—some armed—penetrated the 12-mile zone Japan claims around the islands. For nearly a week thereafter, Chinese vessels, at times numbering approximately 200, moved in and out of the zone. The incursions stopped on Tuesday, but as of yesterday the fishing fleet was still 25 to 35 miles northwest of the islands. This is the first such action since the Senkakus were returned to Japanese jurisdiction by the US under the Okinawa reversion in 1972.

The Chinese action probably was prompted by the well-publicized efforts of antitreaty elements in Japan's ruling Liberal Democratic Party to raise the Senkaku issue in order to prevent resumption of formal negotiations. A public statement of 6 April by Yasuhiro Nakasone, a senior official of the Liberal Democratic Party, that Japan and China should clarify their positions on the Senkakus before concluding the treaty is likely to have particularly nettled Chinese officials.

According to Japanese news reports, the Chinese Ambassador in Tokyo linked the Senkaku incident to statements made by "some Japanese" several weeks before the incursion. On 13 April Sun Ping-Hua, secretary general of the China-Japan Friendship Association, reminded a group of Japanese politicians who were visiting China that both sides had agreed in 1972 to shelve the Senkaku issue during the period of normalization of Sino-Japanese relations. He accused elements in Japan of using the issue to prevent conclusion of the treaty.

3

25X1

25X1

25X1

25X1

25X1

associates in the Pretoria-backed Democratic Turnhalle Alliance have demanded a crackdown on SWAPO's internal wing, which relaxed restraints on political activity. Although the leaders of the internal wing have renounced violence, they have not disavowed their affiliation with the foreign-based SWAPO guer-rillas.

25X1	SWAPO leaders inside Namibia assert that the South African police have arrested almost 100 of their followers since Kapuuo's death. South African officials acknowledge that smaller numbers are being held under the South African Terrorism Act, which permits the detention of suspected subversives without trial for prolonged periods.
25X1	South African Foreign Minister Botha told a Western envoy earlier this week that the Administrator General's latest proclamation is intended to supersede the Terrorism Act. According to Botha, the Terrorism Act will soon be amended so that it will no longer apply to Namibia.
25X1	Several provisions in the latest proclamation appear designed to show that the Administrator General is ruling out some of the harsh treatment that detainees have experienced for years in South Africa and Namibia. Each detainee is to be informed "as far as possible" of the reason for his arrest, and his family is to be told where he is being detained. Detainees are to be visited by a physician at least every three days and by a magistrate every two weeks.
25X1	The proclamation nevertheless reconfirms the denial of due legal process that has long been a factor in international opposition to South Africa's administration of Namibia. Detainees can appeal to a special three-man review committee, but its secret findings are not binding on the Administrator General.
25X1	The limited reforms instituted by the Administrator General since he took office last September suggest that he may apply his latest proclamation more sparingly than the South African police have used the Terrorism Act. Even so, by assuming direct responsibility for detentions, he is likely to bring international discredit upon himself, thereby complicating efforts to win the UN Security Council's acceptance of the Western transitional program. That program calls for the Administrator General to work with a special representative of the UN Secretary General.	25X
	· 5
	5	25X

Approved For Release 2007/04/27 : CIA RDP79T00975A030600010090-2

25X1

25X1

25X1

25X1

25X1

25X1

NIGERIA: Domestic Problems
A dispute in Nigeria's constituent assembly over the draft constitution appears to have been temporarily defused, but the basic issue remains unresolved. At the same time, the has been an outbreak of student unrest rooted in educational grievances.	re
Following an appeal by Head of State General Obasan northern assemblymen have agreed to return to the assembly new Monday but will press for reconsideration of their defeated proposal for a federal Islamic court of appeals, according to a Nigerian press report. Earlier in the week, the most influent Muslim religious leader in the north made a radio appeal for calm and continued stability, asserting that the assembly is doing its best and that the rights of Muslims will be given adequate attention.	xt ro-
The apparent end of the walkout will at least temporarily defuse the emotional court issue. Most non-Muslim southerners and minority tribesmen in the northwho oppose an Islacourt as an undue privilege for Muslimsapparently regard the matter as settled. Should northerners continue to push the issue and the assembly prove unable to resolve the dispute, the military government may press the assembly to compromise.	h- amio e -
If the court issue is not resolved to Muslim satisfaction, widespread demonstrations may well be mounted. They could touch off communal riots between Muslims and the souther Christian minority that resides and works in the north. Such disturbances could deal a sharp, if not a fatal, blow to the military's plans to restore civilian government.	rn
Students at seven major universities throughout Ni- geria this week boycotted classes and held protest demonstra- tions over increased room and board fees. The action was calle by radical student leaders who are demanding free education and a reduction of Nigeria's 40-percennt inflation rate.	ed
Violent clashes between police and students at sever universities resulted in the death of at least one student and injuries to a number of others. Military troops were called into restore order at one northern university when police were routed by students.	đ

6

Approved For Release 2007/04/27: CIA-RDP79T00975A030600010090-2

.
	CHINA: Patents and Trademarks
25X1 '	China is apparently considering a major policy shift on the protection of patents, copyrights, and trademarks. Chinese participation in international agreements in this area would facilitate the expansion of Chinese imports of modern equipment and technology.
25X1	In recent discussions with a major Japanese firm, the Chinese apparently agreed to pay for patents and technology transfers in accordance with the Paris Convention of 1883. Under that convention, patents held in one member country enjoy legal protection in all member countries. China is not a member of the convention and has recognized only those patents held by citizens of China.
25X1	Until recently, China extended trademark protection only on the basis of formal bilateral agreements and contractual provisions. In early 1978, Chinese representatives informed US businessmen that Peking might begin recognizing trademarks on an informal, reciprocal basis. US trademarks, for example, would be recognized since Chinese trademarks can be registered in the US.
25X1	The policy shift appears to be part of a Chinese effort to increase imports of high-technology plants and equipment. Liberalization of China's policy toward foreign trademarks, patents, and copyrights would do much to alleviate the concerns of Western firms about the Chinese copying their industrial technology and design.	25X1
	CHINA: New Grain Purchases
25X1 25X1	The Chinese have purchased 1 million tons of US wheat in the past two weeks, bringing grain imports for this year to a minimum of 5.8 million tons. Rumors of additional grain sales to China continue to circulate in the market. All of the grain is to be delivered before the fall harvest. The Chinese had a poor grain harvest last year, and supplies are tight in some areas.

9

Approved For Relgase 2007/04/27 : CIA-RDP79T00975A030600010090-2

	Approved For Release 2007/04/27 : CIA-RDP79T00975A030600010090-2	25X
		25X
25X1	PAKISTAN: Opium Production //Pakistan, considered to be among the leading illicit opium producers, may produce two or three times more illicit opium this year than the estimated total for last illicit opium this year than the estimated total for last year, according to a recent Drug Enforcement Agency survey.//
25X1	//The DEA has concluded that almost 100,000 acres of poppies are under cultivation in Pakistan that will yield between 400 and 600 tons of opium this year. Previously, we had been told by Pakistani officials that production was on the order of 200 tons a year.//
25X1	//The increase in the latest estimate results both from more accurate information and from an actual boost in production. Encouraged by rising prices—which have sky-rocketed from about $35 per kilogram to over $200 per kilogram in the past three years—farmers are planting more poppies and are using commercial fertilizer to increase yields. The rise in price reflects growing demand, stemming in part from the establishment of laboratories producing heroin and morphine for both domestic and foreign consumption.//
	11

	Approved For Release 2007/04/27 : CIA-RDP79T00975A030600010090-2	05)/4
!		25X1
: :
).
25X1	//The Government's reluctance to crack down on opium producers is traceable in part to the corruption of local officials, but primarily reflects the government's belief that action against the growers and the laboratories is not worth	¢
25X1	the trouble. Such trouble could stir armed tribal resistance.
	BELGIUM: Political Turmoil
25X1	Continued wrangling within Belgium's four-party coalition is impeding government decisionmaking on economic and defense matters and raising doubts about the viability of the 10-month-old government. Prime Minister Leo Tindemans will seek a vote of confidence at the end of May, when he will announce measures to deal with the country's pressing economic problems. Belgium's commitment to NATO remains strong, although proposed cuts in military spending have stirred worries within the alliance.
25X1	Directing an unwieldy coalition has affected Tindemans' health, and his prestige has suffered from his ineffective leadership. By calling for a vote of confidence, Tindemans may be trying to force the Socialists—the second largest coalition partner—into cooperating and compromising in the coming budget debates. If they remain intransigent, Tindemans could then blame them for the government's poor record.
25X1	Foreign Minister Simonet seems to be the prime mover behind what Tindemans sees as a Socialist effort to derail government plans. Simonet's leadership position and his own political ambitions make him one of Tindemans' toughest rivals.
25X1	A budget crisis has been brewing for several months. Revenue shortfalls, resulting in part from lower than projected economic growth, have forced Tindemans to propose an acrossthe-board 2-percent cut in planned 1978 spending. But the Socialists, concerned about the country's high unemployment rate-one of the worst in the EC-continue to push for supplementary payments for the unemployed and the creation of new jobs.
:		•
1 1 1 1	12
25X1
:

25X1

25X1

25X1

25X1

13

,
Angola
	//Angolan President Neto returned to Luanda yester day follo	owing a one-month, nonofficial visit to the USSR.
narturo	//Soviet press coverage on the eve of Neto's de- was bland but underscored Soviet support for Angola and the 1	liberation struggle in southern Africa. While in Moscow, Neto officials	net with President Brezhnev and other senior Soviet s, probably to discuss military and economic assistance
	4
·
	14

Top Secret

(Security Classification)

Top Secret

(Security Classification)