2. The regulations were bound in a maroon-colored binding measuring 5 1/4 by 6 3/4 inches. BUP, Part 1, had approximately 160 or 170 pages. BUP, Part 2, had approximately 200 pages.
3. Prior to World War II, the regulations were not classified. However, [REDACTED] 25X1A

4. Copies filter gradually down to units. A company, for example, may not receive the regulations until perhaps six months after publication. The commanding officer of each unit keeps the regulations in his possession but the soldiers are permitted to read the regulations whenever they wish and, in fact, are encouraged to read them. Platoon commanders and higher are required to know the regulations well.
