1. [Redacted] ship was en route from Murmansk to the Yenisey River area. On entering the sound between Kuzkina Island and the mainland at Kuznetsovskiy Point (N 72-42, E 80-45) [Redacted] ship ran into an area of strong magnetic disturbances. 25X1
2. At Peschanyy Point (N 72-02, E 80-48) there was a lighthouse which was not marked on either the Admiralty chart or the Soviet map. [Redacted] the lighthouse was new, and [Redacted] it was painted red. The lighthouse emitted a signal consisting of two white flashes with an interval between the flashes. 25X1
3. [Redacted] ship ran aground at approximately N 70-35, E 83-40. The weather was thick, and the river pilot steered by a spar buoy which indicated a shallow place. The ship slid gradually and almost unnoticeably onto a sandbank. The pilot radioed for a tugboat without the captain's permission, and the captain refused to make use of the tug, which arrived three or four hours later. The ship worked its way free by itself after having been on the bar for at least four hours. 25X1
4. On the west side of the Yenisey River, about 20 to 30 nautical miles south of Dudinka (N 69-25, E 86-09) [Redacted] a twin-engined passenger aircraft, similar to a Dakota, which landed on a grassy strip. Nearby a single-engined aircraft was parked. Along the river, there was a road which turned in toward a large building, which [Redacted] was a hangar. 25X1
5. [Redacted] three cargo vessels at the quay in Dudinka. One of the vessels had large bundles of netting and some buoys on the after-deck. The netting resembled that used by the Germans as anti-submarine netting. 25X1
