	MATION REPORT INFORMATION REPORT
A F O R
	CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY
This material 18, U.S.C. Secr	contains information affecting the National Defense of the United States within the meaning of the Espionage Laws. Title . 793 and 794, the transmission or revelation of which in any manner to an unauthorised person is prohibited by law.
	S-E-C-R-E-T	0514
		25X1
UNTRY	East Germany REPORT	25 X 1
BJECT	Meteorological and other Activities DATE DISTR. 17 May 1955 of the Soviet and East German Air Forces NO. OF PAGES 2
	REQUIREMENT NO. RD	25X1
		4
ACE ACQUIR	This is UNEVALUATED Information
TE ACQUIRE		0514
	SOURCE EVALUATIONS ARE DEFINITIVE. APPRAISAL OF CONTENT IS TENTATIVE.	25X1
1. Eas	t German and Soviet Air Force Meteorological Organization:
	The Central Weather Bureau is located at Potsdam where it receives
	The Central Weather Bureau is located at Potsdam where it receives and collates information from all over Europe. Meteorologists from the Soviet and East German air forces work side by side.
a .	The Central Weather Bureau is located at Potsdam where it receives and collates information from all over Europe. Meteorologists from the Soviet and East German air forces work side by side. The Central Weather Bureau at Potsdam passes meteorological information by teletype to the Aeroclub at Cottbus, which is the base (Baza) of Soviet
æ. Þ.	The Central Weather Bureau is located at Potsdam where it receives and collates information from all over Europe. Meteorologists from the Soviet and East German air forces work side by side. The Central Weather Bureau at Potsdam passes meteorological information by teletype to the Aeroclub at Cottbus, which is the base (Baza) of Soviet and East German air force meteorologists.
æ. Þ.	The Central Weather Bureau is located at Potsdam where it receives and collates information from all over Europe. Meteorologists from the Soviet and East German air forces work side by side. The Central Weather Bureau at Potsdam passes meteorological information by teletype to the Aeroclub at Cottbus, which is the base (Baza) of Soviet and East German air force meteorologists. The Aeroclub at Cottbus passes the information to its subordimate stations at Drewitz, Kamenz and Bautzen. The Soviet Air Force
a. b. c.	The Central Weather Bureau is located at Potsdam where it receives and collates information from all over Europe. Meteorologists from the Soviet and East German air forces work side by side. The Central Weather Bureau at Potsdam passes meteorological information by teletype to the Aeroclub at Cottbus, which is the base (Baza) of Soviet and East German air force meteorologists. The Aeroclub at Cottbus passes the information to its subordimate stations at Drewitz, Kamenz and Bautzen. The Soviet Air Force transmits meteorological information to Welzow and Finsterwalde.
æ. Þ.	The Central Weather Bureau is located at Potsdam where it receives and collates information from all over Europe. Meteorologists from the Soviet and East German air forces work side by side. The Central Weather Bureau at Potsdam passes meteorological information by teletype to the Aeroclub at Cottbus, which is the base (Baza) of Soviet and East German air force meteorologists. The Aeroclub at Cottbus passes the information to its subordimate stations at Drewitz, Kamenz and Bautzen. The Soviet Air Force transmits meteorological information to Welzow and Finsterwalde.	•
a. b. c.	The Central Weather Bureau is located at Potsdam where it receives and collates information from all over Europe. Meteorologists from the Soviet and East German air forces work side by side. The Central Weather Bureau at Potsdam passes meteorological information by teletype to the Aeroclub at Cottbus, which is the base (Baza) of Soviet and East German air force meteorologists. The Aeroclub at Cottbus passes the information to its subordimate stations at Drewitz, Kamenz and Bautzen. The Soviet Air Force transmits meteorological information to Welzow and Finsterwalde. The teletype contact is made at 0830 hours each day and is called a "Ringfernsprechnetz". Individual teletype messages are also transmitted and received for	•
a. b. c.	The Central Weather Bureau is located at Potsdam where it receives and collates information from all over Europe. Meteorologists from the Soviet and East German air forces work side by side. The Central Weather Bureau at Potsdam passes meteorological information by teletype to the Aeroclub at Cottbus, which is the base (Baza) of Soviet and East German air force meteorologists. The Aeroclub at Cottbus passes the information to its subordimate stations at Drewitz, Kamenz and Bautzen. The Soviet Air Force transmits meteorological information to Welzow and Finsterwalde. The teletype contact is made at 0830 hours each day and is called a "Ringfernsprechnetz".
a. b. c. d.	The Central Weather Bureau is located at Potsdam where it receives and collates information from all over Europe. Meteorologists from the Soviet and East German air forces work side by side. The Central Weather Bureau at Potsdam passes meteorological information by teletype to the Aeroclub at Cottbus, which is the base (Baza) of Soviet and East German air force meteorologists. The Aeroclub at Cottbus passes the information to its subordimate stations at Drewitz, Kamenz and Bautzen. The Soviet Air Force transmits meteorological information to Welzow and Finsterwalde. The teletype contact is made at 0830 hours each day and is called a "Ringfernsprechnetz". Individual teletype messages are also transmitted and received for individual flights or during uncertain weather conditions. The Soviet air force meteorologists find considerable difficulty in	, (
a. b. c. d.	The Central Weather Bureau is located at Potsdam where it receives and collates information from all over Europe. Meteorologists from the Soviet and East German air forces work side by side. The Central Weather Bureau at Potsdam passes meteorological information by teletype to the Aeroclub at Cottbus, which is the base (Baza) of Soviet and East German air force meteorologists. The Aeroclub at Cottbus passes the information to its subordimate stations at Drewitz, Kamenz and Bautzen. The Soviet Air Force transmits meteorological information to Welzow and Finsterwalde. The teletype contact is made at 0830 hours each day and is called a "Ringfernsprechnetz". Individual teletype messages are also transmitted and received for individual flights or during uncertain weather conditions. The Soviet air force meteorologists find considerable difficulty in plotting and forecasting weather conditions in Germany which, they state, are considerably more influenced by the sea and consequently	1
a. b. c. d. f.	The Central Weather Bureau is located at Potsdam where it receives and collates information from all over Europe. Meteorologists from the Soviet and East German air forces work side by side. The Central Weather Bureau at Potsdam passes meteorological information by teletype to the Aeroclub at Cottbus, which is the base (Baza) of Soviet and East German air force meteorologists. The Aeroclub at Cottbus passes the information to its subordimate stations at Drewitz, Kamenz and Bautzen. The Soviet Air Force transmits meteorological information to Welzow and Finsterwalde. The teletype contact is made at 0830 hours each day and is called a "Ringfernsprechnetz". Individual teletype messages are also transmitted and received for individual flights or during uncertain weather conditions. The Soviet air force meteorologists find considerable difficulty in plotting and forecasting weather conditions in Germany which, they state, are considerably more influenced by the sea and consequently more changeable than the conditions they knew in the USSR.	1
a. b. c. d. f. 2. Plo	The Central Weather Bureau is located at Potsdam where it receives and collates information from all over Europe. Meteorologists from the Soviet and East German air forces work side by side. The Central Weather Bureau at Potsdam passes meteorological information by teletype to the Aeroclub at Cottbus, which is the base (Baza) of Soviet and East German air force meteorologists. The Aeroclub at Cottbus passes the information to its subordimate stations at Drewitz, Kamenz and Bautzen. The Soviet Air Force transmits meteorological information to Welzow and Finsterwalde. The teletype contact is made at 0830 hours each day and is called a "Ringfernsprechnetz". Individual teletype messages are also transmitted and received for individual flights or during uncertain weather conditions. The Soviet air force meteorologists find considerable difficulty in plotting and forecasting weather conditions in Germany which, they state, are considerably more influenced by the sea and consequently more changeable than the conditions they knew in the USSR. tting of Aircraft Movements:	1
a. b. c. d. f. 2. Plo	The Central Weather Bureau is located at Potsdam where it receives and collates information from all over Europe. Meteorologists from the Soviet and East German air forces work side by side. The Central Weather Bureau at Potsdam passes meteorological information by teletype to the Aeroclub at Cottbus, which is the base (Baza) of Soviet and East German air force meteorologists. The Aeroclub at Cottbus passes the information to its subordimate stations at Drewitz, Kamenz and Bautzen. The Soviet Air Force transmits meteorological information to Welzow and Finsterwalde. The teletype contact is made at 0830 hours each day and is called a "Ringfernsprechnetz". Individual teletype messages are also transmitted and received for individual flights or during uncertain weather conditions. The Soviet air force meteorologists find considerable difficulty in plotting and forecasting weather conditions in Germany which, they state, are considerably more influenced by the sea and consequently more changeable than the conditions they knew in the USSR.	1
a. b. c. d. f. 2. Plo a.	The Central Weather Bureau is located at Potsdam where it receives and collates information from all over Europe. Meteorologists from the Soviet and East German air forces work side by side. The Central Weather Bureau at Potsdam passes meteorological information by teletype to the Aeroclub at Cottbus, which is the base (Baza) of Soviet and East German air force meteorologists. The Aeroclub at Cottbus passes the information to its subordimate stations at Drewitz, Kamenz and Bautzen. The Soviet Air Force transmite meteorological information to Welzow and Finsterwalde. The teletype contact is made at 0830 hours each day and is called a "Ringfernsprechnetz". Individual teletype messages are also transmitted and received for individual flights or during uncertain weather conditions. The Soviet air force meteorologists find considerable difficulty in plotting and forecasting weether conditions in Germany which, they state, are considerably more influenced by the sea and consequently more changeable than the conditions they knew in the USSR. tting of Aircraft Movements: Aircraft movements of the Soviet air force are plotted on illuminated maps similar to those used in night fighter plotting rooms by the	1
a. b. c. d. f. 2. Plo a.	The Central Weather Bureau is located at Potsdam where it receives and collates information from all over Burope. Meteorologists from the Soviet and East German air forces work side by side. The Central Weather Bureau at Potsdam passes meteorological information by teletype to the Aeroclub at Cottbus, which is the base (Baza) of Soviet and East German air force meteorologists. The Aeroclub at Cottbus passes the information to its subordimate stations at Drewitz, Kamenz and Bautzen. The Soviet Air Force transmits meteorological information to Welzow and Finsterwalde. The teletype contact is made at 0830 hours each day and is called a "Ringfernesprechnetz". Individual teletype messages are also transmitted and received for individual flights or during uncertain weather conditions. The Soviet air force meteorologists find considerable difficulty in plotting and forecasting weether conditions in Germany which, they state, are considerably more influenced by the sea and consequently more changeable than the conditions they knew in the USSR. tting of Aircraft Movements: Aircraft movements of the Soviet air force are plotted on illuminated maps similar to those used in night fighter plotting rooms by the Luftwaffe.	1
a. b. c. d. f. 2. Plo a. b. c.	The Central Weather Bureau is located at Potsdam where it receives and collates information from all over Europe. Meteorologists from the Soviet and East German air forces work side by side. The Central Weather Bureau at Potsdam passes meteorological information by teletype to the Aeroclub at Cottbus, which is the base (Baza) of Soviet and East German air force meteorologists. The Aeroclub at Cottbus passes the information to its subordimate stations at Drewitz, Kamenz and Bautzen. The Soviet Air Force transmits meteorological information to Welzow and Finsterwalde. The teletype contact is made at 0830 hours each day and is called a "Ringfernesprechnetz". Individual teletype messages are also transmitted and received for individual flights or during uncertain weather conditions. The Soviet air force meteorologists find considerable difficulty in plotting and forecasting weather conditions in Germany which, they state, are considerably more influenced by the sea and consequently more changeable than the conditions they knew in the USSR. tting of Aircraft Movements: Aircraft movements of the Soviet air force are plotted on illuminated maps similar to those used in night fighter plotting rooms by the Luftwaffe. The scale of the maps is not known, but the size of the map is known not to exceed three by two metera.	1

Approved For Release 2008/07/24 : CIA-RDP80-00810A006700660002-7

S-E-C-R-E-T

25X	1
2JN	1

- e. For training purposes, a limited number of Aeroclub officers are permitted to visit Soviet air force plotting rooms when activity is taking place, as it is intended that the Aeroclubs will at a later date have similar equipment.
- f. 25X1 an important Soviet Air Force control station for both bombers and fighters.
- g. Aircroft movements of the East German air force are plotted on a map after the information has been received by radio.
- 3. General:
 - a. Anti-Aircraft Radar Control:

At Cottbus airfield during February, an aircraft was observed towing
a sleeve target. the	25 X 1
aircraft had come from Finsterwalde, it towed a target for anti-	25 X 1
aircraft practice, and all the guns taking part were radar-controlled.	25 X 1

b. Effect of Political Situation:

- 25X1
- (2) The work of the GST is being intensified. Two instructors who were previously part-time and honorary members are transferring to full-time paid duty. They are Gerhard Fielder, a fighter pilot of the old German air force and Walter Stilltz, a glider 25X1 expert.

25X1

S-E-C-R-E-T

25X1