Paul F. Anderson
Personnel Manager
Booz, Allen & Hamilton, Inc.
Age: 29
2052 North Lincoln Park West
Chicago, Illinois 60614

Paul F. Anderson was born in Boston, Massachusetts and reared on the East Coast. He attended Regis High School in New York City where he was active in school politics, intramural athletics and dramatics.

He attended the University of Notre Dame, graduating in 1959 cum laude with a B. S. degree in Electrical Engineering. After two years of military service, he entered Carnegie-Mellon University and graduated in 1963 with an M. S. degree in Industrial Administration. At Notre Dame, Mr. Anderson received the Father Steiner Award as the outstanding graduate of the College of Engineering. At Carnegie-Mellon, he received the Elliot Dunlap Smith Award as the outstanding graduate of the Graduate School of Industrial Administration. He attended both universities on scholarship.

In his senior year at Notre Dame, Mr. Anderson was selected by the faculty as chairman of a student commission to evaluate the curriculum of the College of Engineering. The report of this group contributed to several changes in the engineering curriculum over the next few years. He was a member of the Army ROTC unit and was designated a Distinguished Military Graduate. At Carnegie-Mellon, Mr. Anderson was a member of the dean's council, the graduate residence hall council, and championship intramural football, softball, and handball teams.

For the past five years, Mr. Anderson has been employed in Chicago with the management consulting firm of Booz, Allen & Hamilton, Inc. and is presently an associate of the firm. He is currently serving as personnel manager for the firm's largest region. In this capacity, he is responsible for all aspects of personnel administration for the members of the professional staff.

Mr. Anderson is active in professional, political, and community affairs in Chicago. He is an officer of the local chapter of the Institute of Management Sciences. He has been a precinct captain and member of his local Republican Ward Organization for two years. He is currently serving as campaign manager for a candidate for the Illinois State Senate. As

James H. Bockhaus
Business Manager
Age: 29
111 Shady Lane
Fayetteville, New York 13066

James H. Bockhaus, Manager-Resource Allocation for General Electric's Industrial Group, is a resident of Fayetteville, New York.

Born and raised in Iowa, Mr. Bockhaus won the William A. Cordingly Scholarship to attend Phillips Exeter Academy in Exeter, New Hampshire, where he graduated cum laude in 1957. Accepted for the Advanced Standing Program at Harvard, he graduated with a Bachelor's degree in Engineering and Applied Physics, with honors, in 1960. After graduating from Harvard, he joined the General Electric Company and while working in Syracuse, he attended the evening division of Syracuse University. He expects to receive the MS degree in June, 1968.

At General Electric, Mr. Bockhaus has had various assignments in Marketing and Manufacturing. At the Semiconductor Products Department in Syracuse, he served on the Information Processing Council, the Shop Council, and was Chairman of the Business Council for Economy Semiconductors. In 1966, Mr. Bockhaus presented a paper, "Economy Semiconductors-- Their Future," at the WESCON Convention of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers.

He is a member of the Citizen's Foundation, a civic organization formed in Syracuse in 1947 to promote American institutions. Mr. Bockhaus has served on the Board of Governors of the Citizen's Foundation, and has been Chairman of the Business Relations Committee.

Mr. Bockhaus is a member of the IEEE, the Harvard Club of Syracuse, and the Elfun Society. He was formerly a member of the American Helicopter Society, the American Institute of Astronautics and Aeronautics, and the American Management Association.

He is married to the former Nancy Jean Beattie of Great Falls, Montana. They have one daughter.

James E. Connor
Age: 28
Assistant Professor
540 West 122nd Street
New York, New York

Dr. James E. Connor, Assistant Professor of Government at Columbia University, was born and educated in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He graduated in 1957 from St. Joseph's Preparatory School, where he rowed on the varsity crew for three years. He was a member of the 1955 High-School National Champion Eight-Oared Crew and the 1957 Canadian High-School Champion Four-Oared Crew. In addition to scholastic competition, Mr. Connor rowed in American and Canadian National Champion Eights for the Vesper Boat Club in 1955 and 1957, respectively.

Mr. Connor continued his education at Columbia University, where he was named a Columbia College National Scholar. While a sophomore in college, he married Lynda Sue Thompson, formerly of Louisville, Kentucky. In 1961 he received an A.B. in English Literature from Columbia.

Upon graduation, Mr. Connor immediately began graduate study in the Russian Institute and the Department of Public Law and Government of Columbia University. During his graduate career he was awarded a number of fellowships: he was, at various times, a New York State Regents College Teaching Fellow, a Columbia University President's Fellow, and in 1964 a Ford Foundation, Foreign Area Training Program Fellow. In 1963 he received an M.A. in Public Law and Government and in 1964, the Certificate of the Russian Institute of Columbia University.

Mr. Connor was appointed Instructor in Government at Columbia in 1965. Upon being awarded his Ph.D. in January 1968, he was named Assistant Professor. He also serves as a Departmental Consultant and a Faculty Advisor in Columbia College.

In addition to his academic work, Dr. Connor has participated in a variety of civic and public affairs. He has acted as a rapporteur for the Council on Foreign Relations; has been a member of the Executive Committee of the Ansonia Independent Democratic Club; and has served on the Local Candidates and Legislative Committees of the Citizens Union of New York. In 1966 he was appointed Research Director of the New York State Assembly Housing Committee and in 1967 he was named Senior Research Associate of the Committee on the Executive Branch, New York State Constitutional Convention.

Professor Connor has written for the Proceedings of the Academy of Political Science, and he is the editor of a book, Lenin on Politics and Revolution, scheduled for publication in August 1968.

He has lectured at a number of educational institutions, most recently at the New York State School for Labor and Industrial Relations, Cornell University. Professor Connor has also served as a consultant to the Graduate School of Public Affairs of the State University of New York and as Special Consultant on Community Development to the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Arthur E. Dewey
Age: 35
Aide de Camp, US Army
Materiel Command
4726 Pickett Road
Fairfax, Virginia

Arthur E. Dewey was born in Mainesburg, Pennsylvania and spent the first eight years of his education in that State's one-room school system. He went on to high school in Mansfield, Pennsylvania where he became class president and graduated at the top of his class in 1951.

He was appointed to the United States Military Academy in 1952 and graduated as a second lieutenant in the Army Engineer Corps in 1956. He went on to Princeton for his graduate work and was awarded an MSE, Civil Engineering, in 1961.

At West Point he stayed on the Dean's list while participating in a vigorous program of extra-curricular activities. He was Superintendent of the Cadet Sunday School, which is responsible for the religious education of the Post's children. As a member of the Cadet Honor Committee, he chaired the subcommittee studying the honor system and academics. In 1955 he was picked to assist in reorganizing the honor system at the Citadel, Charleston, S. C. For this work he received an official commendation from the President of the Citadel, General Mark Clark. His athletic participation included coach or player duties on track, softball, and rifle intramural teams.

Major Dewey's military duties have taken him from troop commands in the field to assignments on the General Staff in the Pentagon. He is an Army aviator with nearly 3,000 hours of flying time, including more than 300 hours in combat support missions in Viet Nam. In response to the Laotian border crisis of 1962, then Captain Dewey piloted a De Havilland Caribou aircraft in the historic deployment of the 1st Aviation Company from Georgia to Thailand.

Major Dewey is a registered professional engineer. In 1963 his Engineer Construction Company was named one of the top 8 company size units worldwide and became the THIRD US Army's nominee for the Itschner Award -- a distinction made annually to the most outstanding Engineer Company in the Army.

Following Viet Nam, he attended the Command and General Staff College at Ft. Leavenworth and subsequently received a Pentagon assignment and accelerated promotion to Major. In the Pentagon,

Richard T. Johnson
Administrator, Graduate School
Age: 29
Cambridge, Massachusetts

Richard T. Johnson, an Assistant to the Dean of Admissions at the Harvard University Graduate School of Business Administration, grew up in the town of Whittier, California. He attended Whittier High School, and graduated in the top five percent of his class. Active in student government and athletics, he was a member of the All-State Water Polo Team.

Mr. Johnson entered the University of California at Berkeley in 1956, where he graduated with honors in 1961, with a B. S. in Mechanical Engineering. At Berkeley he was captain of the Varsity Water Polo Team which twice won the State championship. He was president of his 220-member residence hall, chairman of the Dean's Advisory Board for Residence Halls, and a member of the Californians, the undergraduate honor society. He was Executive Officer of his NROTC battalion and selected as the most outstanding graduating midshipman in the Class of 1961. During his college years, he helped to found Cal Camp - a student-run summer camp for underprivileged children in the Bay Area operated under the auspices of the University of California.

Entering the Navy in 1961, Mr. Johnson served on the USS Oklahoma City as Missile Division Officer. His ship spent six months in Japan where he learned enough of the Japanese language to set up and conduct tours of the country and organize exchange visits with orphanages.

He then served two years as Operations Officer for the Military Sea Transportation Service in Manila. There he studied the local Filipino dialects and, together with his wife (the former Wendy Slattebo of West Los Angeles), traveled extensively through the archipelago and wrote several articles on primitive Philippine tribes. He organized and led the first full exploration of Palawan's Underground River, which has since become one of the foremost natural attractions of the Philippines. He also was actively involved with the Philippine National Museum, and, in a project undertaken in cooperation with the museum, travelled 300 miles in a kayak in the South China Sea with his wife and their pet rhesus monkey, Gracie. He also served as the head coach of the Philippine National Water Polo Team.

Robert L. Joss
Ph. D. Candidate, Stanford
Age: 26
5-A Escondido Village
Stanford, California

Robert L. Joss was born in Ticonderoga, New York. He attended grade and high schools in Spokane, Washington, where his parents still reside. At Spokane's Lewis and Clark High School he served as student body president, earned valedictorian honors in his graduating class, and received all-city honors as basketball team captain.

He entered the University of Washington in 1959, receiving his B. A. degree in Economics in 1963. Graduating magna cum laude, Joss was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, as well as to the school's Oval Club and Fir Tree honorary societies. Participating in a number of campus activities, he served as President of the Associated Students University of Washington, and president of the Junior Class. This participation earned him designation as the University's outstanding freshman, sophomore, and senior male student, making him the only student ever to receive all three awards. In addition, he played on the school's freshmen basketball team and received all-university honors in two intramural sports.

Upon graduation, Mr. Joss became assistant to the president of Rowley Enterprises, a real estate and construction firm in Issaquah, Washington. During this time he became active in community affairs through membership in Kiwanis International and the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

In 1965 Mr. Joss entered the Graduate School of Business at Stanford University as a Sloan Foundation doctoral fellow. He spent his first year in the Stanford-Sloan executive development program, and received his MBA degree in 1967. During the summer of 1967 he was one of four representatives from the School to participate in an international flying seminar to Western Europe, Czechoslovakia, and the Soviet Union, for discussions with leaders of government and industry in eight European cities. Currently he is completing requirements for his Ph. D. degree in Finance.

He is married to the former Betty Badger of Yakima, Washington. They have two children, Randall, age four, and Jennifer, age three.

Edgar F. Kaiser, Jr.
Economist
Age: 25
3100 Andreasen Drive
Lafayette, California

Edgar Kaiser, Jr., has been serving under contract as a program economist for the Joint Embassy-USAID Economic Division in Saigon, Viet Nam. His primary responsibility has been to train and direct a group of young Vietnamese economists who, with him, have been reporting on rural economic conditions in South Vietnam.

Born in Portland, Oregon, Mr. Kaiser attended grade school in Michigan and California before entering Governor Dummer Academy in Massachusetts. There he captained the school's New England championship track team and was selected as its most valuable player. He was the leader of the school's singing group, and a member of the varsity football team.

In 1961 Mr. Kaiser entered Stanford University and received his B.A. degree in political science in 1965. While at Stanford he was elected president of the largest student organization on campus, and was a member of the President's Student Advisory Committee, chairman of the Dean of Men's Student Relations Committee, and a member of the Stanford ski team.

Mr. Kaiser then entered the Harvard Business School receiving his MBA in May of 1967. While at Harvard he wrote several case studies which subsequently have been used by the Harvard Business School, and published an article on the role of the government in labor negotiations, one of his special interests.

During his ten years as a student, Mr. Kaiser had a variety of part-time jobs in the United States and overseas, ranging from construction jobs to steel mills and automobile plants. An accomplished snow and water skier, Mr. Kaiser is an accredited instructor of both. He is also a professional singer and song writer, having had a number of records released.

Mr. Kaiser's community activities have included participation in the Bay Area Youth Guidance Program in San Francisco. During his four years at Stanford, he helped organize and performed in charity water ski shows for the Palo Alto Convalescent Home. He has also participated in a Danny Thomas charity concert in the San Francisco Cow Palace. At Harvard, Mr. Kaiser served as an assistant to the manager of the WKBG Inc. television studio where, along with other duties, he was responsible for working with the Massachusetts United Fund Promotional Fund Raising Campaign.

Mr. Kaiser was married to the former Caroline MacTyre Orr of Scotland in November of 1966. They have one daughter, Suzanne, born in Bangkok, Thailand.

David C. Miller, Jr.
Researcher
Age: 25
250 Meadow Hill Lane
Chagrin Falls, Ohio

David C. Miller, Jr., was born, and attended public schools, in Cleveland, Ohio. He was selected as his high school's first American Field Service student, and spent the summer of 1959 in Takamatsu, Japan. He served as President of his graduating class at Orange High School in 1960.

Mr. Miller graduated cum laude from Harvard University in Economics in 1964, having received the Harvard Club of Cleveland Scholarship. While at Harvard, he was Chairman of the Prisons Committee and an officer of Phillips Brooks House, and helped organize the first public exhibition and sale of prison art work. He was Vice Chairman of the Combined Charities Drive, a member of the Cabinet of the Crimson Key, a member of the Spee Club, and of the Hasty Pudding Institute of 1770. In addition, he worked during the school year in the Admissions Office to help pay for his education.

Upon graduation from college, Mr. Miller entered the University of Michigan Law School, where he received his Juris Doctor degree in 1967. While in Law School, he was active in civil rights and Republican party activities. A series of seminars on local civil rights problems, held in his dormitory room, grew into a statewide College Republican Civil Rights Conference, sponsored by Governor George Romney.

During his last two years in Law School, Mr. Miller organized the Cornerstone Project, a non-profit corporation which each summer offers a series of intensive two-week seminars in urban problems for Congressional Interns and Federal Government employees. He is currently Chairman of the Board of the Project, which will offer seminars in New York City, Atlanta, Cleveland, and Boston this summer. The Project is sponsored by Mayors John Lindsay, Ivan Allen, Carl Stokes, and Kevin White, and is supported by a number of foundations.

Upon graduation from Law School, Mr. Miller went to Vietnam with the Simulmatics Corporation as a research associate. In the last year he has worked on and/or directed research projects for the Advanced Research Projects Agency, the Economics Section of USAID, and the Political Section of the American Embassy in Saigon. Laurence I. Moss
Nuclear Engineer
Age: 32
Tarzana, California

Mr. Moss is a member of the Technical Staff of the Atomic International Division of North American Rockwell Corporation. He is engaged in the analysis of hypothetical accidents in the advanced nuclear power plants now being designed.

He was born in New York, New York. Following graduation from Forest Hills High School he attended M. I. T., where he received his B. S. in Chemical Engineering in 1956 and his M. S. in Nuclear Engineering in 1958. While at M. I. T. he served as Treasurer of Tau Beta Pi, Secretary of Phi Lambda Upsilon (the honorary chemical sciences society), and Athletic Chairman of his dormitory. He was a member of the Varsity Tennis Team.

In 1959, after serving as a Research Assistant at the M. I. T. Nuclear Reactor, Mr. Moss began his employment with Atomic International. During his nine years with that company he has directed over $10 million of research and development work with nuclear reactors. He has authored or co-authored more than a dozen technical papers. He is a member of the company's Reactor Safeguards Review Panel.

Mr. Moss enjoys hiking, mountain climbing, and white-water river-running. His extensive travels, beginning as a teenager, gave him a deep appreciation for the beauty of the American earth and led to his keen interest in conservation.

Active in the fight to keep dams out of the Grand Canyon, Mr. Moss helped prepare the economic and engineering analyses that demonstrated that the proposed dams were not economically justified. These analyses, presented in testimony before the House and Senate Interior Committees, contributed to the withdrawal of Administration support for authorization of the dams.

In the course of his conservation efforts, Mr. Moss has written articles for national publications. He has made numerous appearances on radio and television, as well as before civic and university groups. He has been active in Sierra Club affairs and recently was elected to the Board of Directors of that organization.

Mr. Moss holds a pilot's license with an instrument rating. He is single.

John W. Woodmansee, Jr.
Major, U. S. Army
Age: 34
Qtrs 535-A
West Point, New York

A native of Memphis, Tennessee, Major John W. Woodmansee, Jr. was graduated cum laude from Culver Military Academy, Indiana, in 1952. He won a competitive appointment to the United States Military Academy through Culver's designation as an "honor military school." Only six appointments from this source were given throughout the country that year.

At West Point, Woodmansee was on the Dean's List each semester, served as a cadet officer, and was a member of the Army Varsity wrestling team. He received a Bachelor of Science degree in 1956, and was commissioned a second lieutenant in Armor branch.

After earning the qualifications of parachutist and army aviator, Woodmansee was assigned to Europe and flew patrols on the Czechoslovakian border during the 1959 Berlin crisis. He was later assigned as company commander in the Fourth Armored Division.

In 1962, Woodmansee was assigned to the 82d Aviation Battalion, 82d Airborne Division. He is believed to be the first person in the U. S. Army to successfully conduct night experiments with helicopters using only infra-red lights and a pilot's infra-red binocular. In 1963, Woodmansee reported to South Viet Nam where he commanded a flight of armed helicopters in support of a Marine helicopter squadron in Da Nang. He was awarded two Distinguished Flying Crosses, fifteen Air Medals, a Bronze Star, and the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with Silver Star.

Upon his return from Viet Nam, Major Woodmansee was selected as one of fourteen Army officers to attend the Air Force Command and Staff College. While attending this course, he enrolled in night sessions with George Washington University seeking a Masters Degree in Public Administration. In 1965, he completed the requirements for both institutions, receiving his degree from George Washington, and being designated by the Command and Staff College as a "Distinguished Graduate."

For the past three years, Major Woodmansee has been assigned to the faculty of the United States Military Academy where he is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Military Art and Engineering, and directs a course in the History of Revolutionary Warfare. In addition to instructing, he has edited and contributed to five volumes of readings in revolutionary warfare which have been accepted by the Department as the standard cadet text for the course. In 1967, he wrote and narrated an Academy television show on the history of aviation, and was asked to be a principal writer and guest on a National Broadcasting Company documentary on revolutionary warfare. The program is currently being shown throughout the country on the "Since Wars Began" series.

In addition to his academic pursuits, Major Woodmansee has remained active in sports and studied oil-painting under a well-known New England artist. He was selected to appear in the 1967 edition of "Outstanding Young Men of America" and this spring was chosen by the Army for an accelerated promotion to Lieutenant Colonel, scheduled for this fall.

Major Woodmansee's wife, the former Patricia Williams of Memphis, Tennessee, and their three children, reside at West Point where Mrs. Woodmansee is the Program Chairman of the Wives Club and is active in an amateur theatrical society. This past fall, Mrs. Woodmansee coordinated with the Consul General of Japan to produce a highly acclaimed Japanese program of professional entertainment for the Wives Club. She has also initiated a program with the Provost Marshal to gain more public interest in and support for teen-age programs and problems of juvenile delinquency.
