Dear [Redacted]

STAT

It was a great pleasure to hear from you, and I have followed the correspondence that Clover and [Redacted] have been having and in that way keeping in some touch with developments.

STAT

It did not require any identification for me to recall our days [Redacted] together, although, I am frank to admit I was not sure that I deciphered your initials correctly -- that you will excuse if I am wrong -- but hope this will reach you.

STAT

I will be very glad to be of help to your son. I suggest he get in touch with me when he gets established here in New York and I should be glad to do what I could most effectively do. I do not generally give out letters "To Whom It May Concern" but I find it much more useful to write personally to friends of mine who might be able to be of help. It will be a pleasure to be of whatever assistance I can.

Faithfully yours,
