of beans, and 20 kilograms of straw and cereals for seed purposes. An inventory wadamade when farmers joined, and those who did not possess the required farm implements were required to pay in 2,000 leva (old currency) for each decare of land which was handed over to the farm. However, no matter how many decares of land each farmer contributed to the cooperative, he was still left five decares of land for his family group, which he tended privately.

- 4. The TKZS possessed 60 or 70 cows, four oxen, 250 horses, 700 sheep, 200 pigs (small), 500 chickens, 1,200 hens, and 50 hives.
- 5. Machinery used by the TKZS belonged to the MTS (Mashino Traktorno Stantsiya; Machine Tractor Station) of Byala Slatina and consisted of two Soviet combines, 350 plows, four mechanical plows, five or six Stalinets Plows (which plow 120-150 decares of land per day), three or four Fordson Plows, and a certain number of McCormick Plows.
- 6. In 1952, the cooperative suffered because of the tremendous dryness. Many members were recruited and transferred by the Communist Party to work in factories throughout Vratsa Okrug to earn money to feed their families. According to the Five Year Plan and the Government Agricultural Cultivation Plan, the TKZS of Burdarski-Geran is to deliver 500,000 kilograms of wheat annually to the State. However, because of the drought, in 1952, the farm produced only 500,000 kilograms of wheat, which then was distributed as follows:
  - a. State deliveries, 500,000 kilograms;
  - b. Payment to the MTS, 80,000 kilograms;
  - c. Social Aid fund (for the old people, children, and sick members) of the TKZS, 80,000 kilograms; and
  - d. Seed reserve, 100,000 kilograms.

7. The total number of working days for the year was 138,000 for which it received the following:

- a. Corn, none;
- b. Wheat, 1,200 kilograms;
- c. Sunflower seeds, 20 grams per working day;
- d. Cheese, 40 grams per working day;
- e. Wool, two grams per working day; and
- f. Beans, 48 grams per working day.

8. This year, however, the situation is much better. In 1953, each decare of land has produced 400 kilos of wheat, and according to a rough estimate, each member of the TKZS will get eight kilos per work day. In this respect, under the private ownership system, land produced only 150 kilos of wheat per year in comparison with the 300-400 kilos per decare with the proper fertilization, mechanization, etc. available through collectivization.

9. At the end of the agricultural year, the State pays the TKZS 0.45 leva per kilogram for the 500,000 kilograms of wheat required for the State stockpiles. At the same time, farmers were selling their wheat at the official rate of 2.40 leva. It is interesting to note that there are no official fixed prices for the payment of wheat to the TKZS, either when purchasing the 500,000 kilogram quota, or when purchasing it from the farmers directly. Prices depend upon the quality of the wheat as well as the quantity which the farm is able to produce; in this way the government can help the farmer by purchasing wheat at higher prices when the crop is poor, or can pay lower prices when the crop is plentiful, as it is in 1953.

10. Members of the TKZS, including even kulaks, were permitted to purchase goods from the cooperative of the TKZS, at the following prices:

a. Tomatoes, 0.05 leva per kilo;

b. Peppers, 0.02 leva per kilo; peppers are so plentiful that children play with them in the streets;

c. Fresh beans, 0.20 leva per kilo;

d. Watermelons, 0.50 leva per kilo;

e. Lettuce, 0.02 leva per kilo;

f. Bread, from 1.96 to 4.20 leva per kilo;

g. Yogurt, 1.20 leva per kilo;

h. Skimmed milk, 1.10 leva per liter;

i. Eggs, 0.60 leva each;

j. Sugar, 10.00 leva per kilo; and

k. Meat (veal), 6.00 leva per kilo.

11. All farm work in 1953 has been conducted on a 24-hour non-stop basis, i.e., on three 8-hour work shifts. There are 13 brigades at the Burdarski-Geran TKZS, each composed of 40 men and four work chiefs. Group chiefs do the same work as the others, but receive an additional two percent of the produce at the end of the year. There are brigades for different tasks, such as building, gardening, blacksmith work, carpentry, etc. Brigadiers allocate work by calling at the home of members in the evening and telling the head of the house what the schedule will be for the following day.

12. Harvesting was begun during the early days of July 1953. The TKZS organized public kitchens in the fields, and issued three meals a day. Deductions for the meals will be made at the end of the year when the goods are distributed. Normally, farmers eat bread and onions. 50X1
