MEMORANDUM FOR THE HEADS OF
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS AND AGENCIES

Enclosed for your information is a copy of the Third Annual Report on executive branch administration of the Privacy Act of 1974, which I recently transmitted to the Congress.

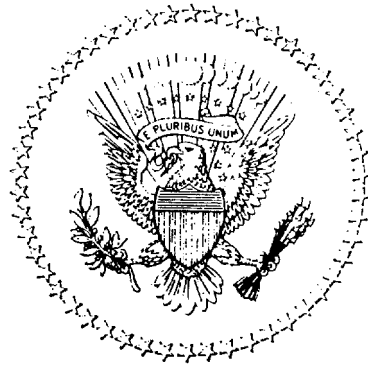

The protection of personal privacy is of great concern to the American people, and an important priority of my Administration. I urge you to personally review this report and take steps to further improve your agency's administration of the Privacy Act.

The report indicates that many agencies have made substantial improvements in their implementation of the Act. I urge each of you, however, to initiate additional efforts during the coming year to reduce the amount of personal information collected and maintained by the Federal government, to avoid unwarranted disclosure of this information, and to improve the internal management of personal data systems.

I have asked the Director of the Office of Management and Budget to monitor these efforts and to keep me informed of your progress.

The White House

Dear Mr. President:

I am pleased to submit for your review and approval the Third Annual Report to the Congress of agency activities pursuant to the Privacy Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-579). The report consists of a narrative review of the operation of the Act during 1977 and a listing of Federal personal data systems subject to the Act. The report indicates that -

- ° The requirements of the Act have been successfully integrated into the operations of most departments and agencies within the executive branch.
- ° The number of people who exercised their rights under the Act has increased.
- ° A number of agencies have achieved significant reductions in the amount of personal data they maintain.
- ° The use and disclosure of personal information by Federal agencies should be closely monitored.

During 1978 the oversight activities of the Office of Management and Budget will be directed towards a zero-based review of agency Privacy Act activities, including policies regarding the disclosure and transfer of information.

Sincerely,

James T. McIntyre, Jr.

I INTRODUCTION

The Privacy Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-579) provides that:

"The President shall submit to the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate, by June 30 of each calendar year, a consolidated report, separately listing for each Federal agency the number of records contained in any system of records which were exempted from the application of this section under the provisions of subsections (j) and (k) of this section during the preceding calendar year, and the reasons for the exemptions, and such other information as indicates efforts to administer fully this section." (5 U.S.C. 552a(p)).

This Third Annual Report of executive branch activities under the Privacy Act covers operational experience during calendar year 1977. The report is based upon information submitted to OMB by executive branch agencies and OMB experiences in overseeing implementation of the Act.

In recognition of a fundamental right of individual privacy which is protected by the Constitution of the United States, the Privacy Act of 1974 established a system of checks and balances to regulate the collection, maintenance, use and dissemination of personal information by the Federal Government in order to achieve a balance between the Government's need to know and the individual's right to privacy. Under the Act:

Individuals have a right to:

- Know about and review personal information maintained about them by Federal agencies.
- Request that personal information which they believe to be incorrect be amended or corrected.
- Appeal adverse agency decisions relative to requests for amendment or correction.
- Sue an agency in U. S. District Courts for violations of the Act.

Federal departments and agencies are responsible for:

- ° Collecting and maintaining only that personal information which is relevant and necessary.
- ° Maintaining personal data in a timely and accurate manner.
- ° Safeguarding personal data and limiting unauthorized disclosure of such data.
- ° Assuring adequate opportunities for public scrutiny and comment on agency personal recordkeeping practices.

The Office of Management and Budget is responsible for:

- ° Providing oversight and assistance to agencies in their implementation of the Act.

II CONCLUSIONS

The first two years of operation under the Privacy Act were devoted to the establishment of agency programs, policies and procedures for implementing the Act. Special emphasis was placed on identifying and inventorying the nature and magnitude of personal data which is collected and maintained by the Federal Government.

During 1977 many agencies undertook a comprehensive review of the types of data which they maintain about American citizens and their internal programs for managing this data.

Conclusions that can be drawn from experiences during 1977 are:

- ° Many agencies continued to devote significant resources to refining their programs for administering personal data.
- ° A number of agencies achieved significant reductions in the amount of personal data they maintain.
- ° Federal personal recordkeeping remained fairly stable during 1977, with agency reduction efforts balanced by growth in the size of some systems of records.
- ° Agencies are increasing their use of computers to maintain personal data.

- Public reporting is involved in only 568 of 6,424 systems of records (8.8%), but those systems account for 48.9% of the total individuals' records.
- There was little public comment received by Federal agencies during 1977 relative to the Privacy Act.
- The Federal Register is not an effective means for obtaining public comment on agency privacy issuances.
- The cost of publishing agency Privacy Act notices in the Federal Register is significant.
- Agencies placed greater emphasis on safeguarding personal data during 1977.
- The use of exemptions did not change significantly from 1976.
- Exemptions were generally invoked on a case by case basis and were not used automatically to deny access to records.
- The requirements to collect information directly from individuals have not adversely affected agency operations.
- The availability of information from third party sources has decreased in some areas.
- Inconsistencies between Federal, State and local privacy laws have created some problems.
- Most requests for access to records were made by members of the general public, and not Federal employees.
- More than 95% of all requests for access were granted.
- The number of lawsuits filed under the Privacy Act in 1977 was twice the number filed in 1976 (141 vs 69).

III SUMMARY OF ACCOMPLISHMENTS AND FUTURE PLANS

Accomplishments

Federal activities during 1977 were directed towards the reduction of personal data maintained by Federal agencies in order to reduce unnecessary Government intrusion into the private lives of Americans and reduce the cost and burden of public reporting. This effort was initiated by the Director of OMB in a letter dated March 7, 1977 in which the heads of each executive department and agency were requested to develop plans for eliminating or curtailing systems which contained personal information. Special letters were also sent to the heads of 17 major recordkeeping agencies, asking them to place a high priority on reducing the amount of personal data maintained by each agency. Among the results of this effort were:

- The Department of Defense, primarily through the elimination of duplicate records, reduced its number of systems from 2,219 to 2,150 and the number of individual records from 321.3 million to 296.7 million.
- The Department of Commerce eliminated eight systems and reduced the number of individual records by 14.3 million.
- The General Services Administration was able to eliminate 14 systems of records (15% of their total) and reduce their records on individuals by 44% (from 3.4 million to 1.5 million).
- The Department of Transportation eliminated 19 systems of records.
- The Civil Service Commission reduced the number of records it maintained from 103.3 million to 87.8 million (15%), but the majority of this was due to better estimates on the magnitude of recordkeeping.
- The Selective Service System reported that it eliminated 1.8 million draft records during 1977.
- A number of small agencies concluded that it was not feasible to reduce their personal recordkeeping since they were only collecting and maintaining the minimum personal information necessary to perform their mission.

Future Plans

Privacy Act activities during 1977 concentrated on a reduction in the number of systems and amount of data on individuals maintained by the Federal Government. Future activities will continue these efforts and concentrate on improving the management of personal data to assure compliance with the letter and spirit of the Privacy Act.

- ° Agencies have been encouraged to make their review of personal recordkeeping a continuing high priority process to assure that unnecessary new recordkeeping is prevented and that existing records, as they become unnecessary, are eliminated. The Departments of Labor and Commerce, and other agencies, have already committed themselves to this effort.
- ° In conjunction with the above action, agencies have been encouraged to undertake a qualitative zero-based review of their internal programs, policies and directives for administering the Privacy Act. The CIA, DOE, HEW, CSC, DOT and several other agencies have indicated their intent to conduct these intensive reviews during 1978.
- ° The Department of Defense has a program underway to review data collection forms in order to eliminate redundant data elements. This should significantly reduce the amount of data collected from DOD employees, who are the primary subjects of DOD record systems.
- ° The Department of Commerce is reviewing six major systems of records for possible elimination in 1978.
- ° The General Services Administration and the Department of Transportation are both continuing their reviews and anticipate further reductions.
- ° The Selective Service System expects to eliminate an additional 8 million records during 1978.
- ° During 1978 OMB will issue a government-wide computer security policy.
- ° There is currently underway a Presidential Privacy Initiative to identify further actions for protecting individual privacy. The basis for this study is the final report of the Privacy Protection Study Commission. The Domestic Policy Staff, OMB and other agencies are participating in this effort.
- ° During 1978 the Federal Data Processing Reorganization Project will release its final report on the Federal Government's acquisition, management and use of computers. A portion of this report specifically addresses privacy and confidentiality issues.

Project Match

During 1977, the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare initiated a program, Project Match, which was designed to curtail fraud in Government welfare programs by matching Government employees' records against welfare rolls. This program, which was impossible prior to the advent of the computer, has brought to the forefront of public awareness the issue of how to balance societal needs with individual rights. This program, which has the potential to save millions of dollars annually, threatens the individual privacy of American citizens if adequate safeguards are not employed. It is likely that this is the forerunner of a large number of similar programs. OMB, in conjunction with other agencies, is developing guidelines for the conduct of such programs. These guidelines will be issued during 1978.

IV. SCOPE AND NATURE OF FEDERAL PERSONAL RECORDKEEPING

The Privacy Act requires each Federal agency to publish in the Federal Register a notice of the "existence and character" of each system of personal records which it maintains.

As of the end of 1977, 92 agencies had published notices for 6,424 systems containing 4.015 billion individual records. It should be noted that records on the same individual are frequently contained in a number of systems. Consequently, the total number of individual records referred to in this report does not mean that records are being maintained on that number of discrete individuals. A complete listing of systems maintained by each agency is included in Appendix C.

Table I provides a summary of changes during 1977 in the number of agencies which published system notices, the number of systems for which notices were published and the number of records on individuals contained in those systems. It shows:

- ° A net decrease of 5 agencies which published system notices, due largely to the consolidation of several agencies into the Department of Energy.
- ° A net reduction of 329 systems of records --- from 6,753 in 1976 to 6,424 in 1977.
- ° A net increase of 26 million (.6%) in the number of individual records maintained by agencies -- from 3.989 billion in 1976 to 4.015 billion in 1977.

Changes in the Scope of Personal Recordkeeping

Table II provides a more comprehensive summary of personal recordkeeping by various Federal agencies and changes which occurred during 1977. It shows that:

- ° Twenty of the 92 agencies reporting under the Act maintained 85% of the 6,424 systems and 91.6% of the 4.0 billion records on individuals. Of the 4.0 billion records on individuals, 58.5% are maintained by two agencies -- the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and the Department of the Treasury.
- ° The net increase of 26 million records which occurred during 1977 was primarily due to increases in personal records reported by the Departments of Health, Education and Welfare, Treasury, Labor, Transportation, and the Veterans Administration.

Changes in the Nature of Personal Recordkeeping

Table III summarizes changes which occurred during 1977 in the extent to which personal data systems were computerized and changes in the purpose for which these systems were used. The table shows that:

- ° The largest number of personal data systems maintained by Federal agencies continue to be for internal administrative functions of Government (e.g., Government personnel records, travel records, etc.). Of the 6,424 systems, 4,185 or 65% are maintained for Government administrative purposes.
- ° While the largest number of personal data systems maintained by the Government are manual systems (4,423 out of 6,424 systems), there is a continuing trend toward computerizing personal data systems. In 1977 31.1% of the systems and 79.6% of the personal records were totally or partially computerized whereas in 1976 28.7% of the systems and 75.9% of the personal records were computerized.
- ° In 1977 as in 1976, computers were used more extensively for large systems than small systems.
- ° The administrative processes established by the Privacy Act seem to have had a greater effect on reducing personal recordkeeping of Federal agencies for internal administrative records than on records maintained on the public at large in conjunction with the administration of agency programs. During 1977, the total number of systems for internal administrative purposes were reduced from 4,566 to 4,185 and the number of records of individuals in those systems were reduced from .7 to .6 billion. During this same time, the number of systems for administration of agency programs rose from 2,187 to 2,239 and the number of records in those systems rose from 3.3 to 3.4 billion. The number of systems used in support of Federal assistance programs was reduced from 712 to 676, but this is not significant since it represents a reclassification of systems previously identified as program related systems rather than a reduction per se.

The number of systems and individuals by purpose for each agency is shown in Appendix B-1.

More detailed information on the purposes for which personal data systems were maintained by Federal agencies is contained in Appendix B-2.

Appendix B-3 provides an analysis of the extent to which personal data systems subject to the Privacy Act of 1974 are also subject to the Federal Reports Act of 1948. In general, it shows that only 568 of the 6,424 personal data systems (8.8%) involve public reporting subject to the Federal Reports Act but they contain 48.9% of the 4.0 billion records maintained on individuals.

V. AGENCY ADMINISTRATION OF THE ACT

The Privacy Act of 1974 established a code of fair information practice to assure that:

- ° Only the minimum amount of information, for purposes required by law or executive order, is collected;
- ° Information maintained is accurate, relevant, timely and complete;
- ° Information is validated, to the extent possible, prior to disclosure outside the agency;
- ° Information is safeguarded adequately;
- ° Agency personnel are subject to rules of conduct to assure that these requirements are met.

Agency Administration

Agency reports and OMB experience indicate that, generally the requirements of the fair information practice code have been met and are being incorporated into the day-to-day activities of the agencies.

- A major portion of the agencies' Privacy Act implementation during 1977 was directed toward assuring compliance with this code.
- Most agencies reported no problems in administering the Act.
- A number of agencies reported that adherence to Privacy Act standards of accuracy, relevance and timeliness had resulted in simplifying the design of new forms and contributed to carrying out their substantive mission in a more effective manner.
- Employees of twelve agencies received additional training in the Privacy Act (Departments of Labor, Defense, Treasury, Transportation, and Health, Education, and Welfare, Agency for International Development, Veterans Administration, Community Services Administration, National Credit Union Administration, National Transportation Safety Board, Postal Service and Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation).
- New or revised staff directives were prepared and made available to staff of the Departments of Agriculture, Defense, Commerce, Treasury, Transportation, and HEW, the Community Services Administration, EEOC, the FDIC, Committee for Purchase from the Blind and Other Severely Handicapped; the Marine Mammal Commission, Nuclear Regulatory Commission, Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, and the Railroad Retirement Board.
- In order to better monitor their Privacy Act compliance, the Department of Agriculture, Panama Canal Company, and the National Labor Relations Board increased the size of their Privacy Act staffs.
- The Department of Energy has initiated an effort to combine and coordinate the Privacy Act activities of its predecessor agencies.
- Additional safeguards for personal data were established by seven agencies: Departments of Commerce, Justice, Defense; NLRB, the Pennsylvania Avenue Development Corporation, the Railroad Retirement Board, and National Transportation Safety Board.

A few agencies identified minor problems with certain aspects of the information practice code established by the Privacy Act. These include:

- ° Accounting for disclosure - While no agency indicated that the maintenance of disclosure accounting records presented major difficulties, many felt that the requirement was rather cumbersome and not worth the effort required, especially since only a few requests were received for access to the accounting data.
- ° Records retention - The Immigration and Naturalization Service (Justice) observed that the length of time for which accounting records must be kept (five years or the length of the record, whichever is longer) is significantly expanding their record holdings since alien registration records must be kept for 100 years beyond the last action taken by the Immigration and Naturalization Service. They have suggested that the requirement be changed to five years or the life of the record, whichever is shorter.
- ° Safeguards on information - A number of agency reports indicated that greater security measures were necessary for sensitive computerized data. For example, the Department of Commerce listed computer security as one of its three major areas of concentration for 1978; the Department of Justice developed a department-wide directive entitled "Privacy Act Security Regulations for Systems of Records;" and the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare conducted a Department-wide review of compliance with systems security requirements aimed at preparing a similar issuance.

Office of Management and Budget Oversight Activities

During 1977 the Office of Management and Budget:

- ° Initiated the recordkeeping reduction effort described in Section III.
- ° Provided comments on the initial rules and system notices of four agencies and reviewed 102 "new system" reports covering 226 systems.

- ° Assisted the Copyright Office in its efforts to implement the Act. The Copyright Office, although a part of the Legislative Branch, was made subject to the Privacy Act by the new Copyright Act.
- ° Assisted the Department of Energy in converting system notices and rules of its predecessor organizations.
- ° Assisted a number of other agencies in their Privacy Act implementation efforts.
- ° Participated in training sessions held by the Civil Service Commission and in conferences on the Privacy Act and related issues sponsored by groups such as the Federal Bar Association.

Operation of the Exemption Provisions

The Privacy Act defines nine categories of information which agencies may exempt from certain provisions of the Act. However, before an exemption may be invoked the agency must publish a rule, in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act, which identifies the provisions from which the system is exempted and justifies the use of the exemption. No system, however, can be exempted from the requirement to publish a notice of the system's existence.

The number of systems exempted during 1977 increased slightly from the number exempted in 1976 - from 892 to 898. The use of exemptions did not change significantly during 1977.

Table IV provides a summary of systems exempted by agencies. It shows that:

- ° During 1977, 50 of the 92 agencies maintaining systems of records exempted a total of 898 or 14.0% of the 6,424 systems.

A table showing the exemptions invoked by each agency is included in Appendix B.

Table V indicates the extent to which various exemptions permitted by the Act were invoked by agencies in 1975, 1976, and 1977. In reviewing Table V, it should be noted that in many cases more than one exemption is invoked for any given system.

- ° Increases in numbers of systems were not generally matched by increases in numbers of exempt systems. Fourteen agencies reported a net increase in numbers of systems, but only five of these had a corresponding increase in exempt systems.
- ° Of the nine agencies which showed a net decrease in total systems, only three showed a decrease in exempt systems. These were the Departments of Agriculture, the Treasury, and Housing and Urban Development.

The administration of exemption provisions appears to present few problems to the agencies. Of the 50 agencies which maintain exempt systems, only two suggested that the available exemptions should be expanded:

- ° The Civil Service Commission which performs personnel investigations on individuals being considered for employment with international organizations, suggests that the exemption in subsection (k)(5) be expanded to include records compiled in those investigations.
- ° The FBI recommended that additional exemptions be provided to cover material--"the release of which is prohibited by Federal statute...the release of which would constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy; and...material constituting pre-decisional, deliberative comments of agency officials, e.g., Legal Counsel and similar advisors."

A review of exemption usage during 1977 indicates that exemptions are not automatically used by agencies to deny access to records, but are usually invoked on a case by case basis.

Even when systems were exempted, agencies indicated they were not fully invoked:

- ° Twelve agencies stated that exemptions were seldom or never invoked and that non-exempt portions of records were routinely segregated and released.
- ° The National Credit Union Administration proposed that the procedures for exempting systems of records be changed. NCUA suggested that exemptions be applied to records on a case by case basis when requests are received, rather than by advance rulemaking.

VI CHANGES IN PATTERNS OF INFORMATION EXCHANGE

A number of provisions of the Privacy Act were designed to change existing agency practices relative to the collection and disclosure of personal data. The most significant of these are the requirements to:

- ° Collect information, to the extent practical, from the subject individual;
- ° Inform the individual of the agency's authority for collecting such information, of the purposes and routine uses of the information, and the effects, if any, of not providing it;
- ° Limit the disclosure of information without the consent of the individual.

Collection of Information from the Subjects

The requirements of the Act to collect information directly from the subject, and to inform him or her of the authority, uses, and effects of not providing the information have not adversely affected agency operations.

- A number of agencies stated that collection of information directly from individuals has been a long standing agency practice.
- The Department of Commerce indicated that "the legal requirement has strengthened personnel office practice by preventing inclusion in personnel files of memorandums and notes written without the employee's knowledge."
- The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was of the opinion that "the enactment of the Privacy Act may encourage individuals to provide information which they might not otherwise have provided."
- The Civil Service Commission noted that, while individuals' willingness to provide information was not a problem, "it is difficult to develop a [Privacy Act] statement that informs the data subject...while at the same time keeping the statement concise enough both to encourage reading of it and to fit on the form."
- The Securities and Exchange Commission and the Air Force (Department of Defense) indicated that the notification statement adds to their paperwork.

Limitations on Disclosure of Information

The limitations of the Act on disclosure of information without the written consent of the subject has not been unduly burdensome for the agencies:

- Fifty-two agencies reported that there was no effect on their activities.
- A number of agencies raised concern about the increased paperwork associated with accounting for disclosures and with obtaining the consent of individuals for disclosures. In some cases, this paperwork has led to delays in providing information to other agencies.
- In a few cases agencies reported they were unable to make transfers or disclosures of records; these included the Veterans Administration and the Department of Labor. However, no adverse impact on agency operations was reported.

- ° The General Services Administration found that its access to agency records, necessary for its records management function, was limited by the disclosure provisions of the Privacy Act. Consequently, agencies were requested to establish a routine use to permit disclosure of records to records management personnel.

One of the driving forces for passage of the Act was concern over the unwarranted use of information contained about individuals in the files of Federal agencies. It is still too early to fully assess the extent to which these provisions have served to assure a greater amount of privacy. Careful monitoring of the operation of the disclosure provisions of the Act and its effects is necessary.

Confidentiality of Third Party Sources

Although the Privacy Act specifies that, wherever possible, information should be obtained from the individual concerned, there are instances where information from other sources is necessary. A number of agencies, however, reported difficulties in obtaining information from third party sources when the source could not be offered confidentiality by the agency. The Act gives an individual the right of access to records kept by Federal agencies about him, which includes the right to know the source of any information in that record. The agency may in some limited cases withhold certain records to protect the source. However, these cases are narrowly defined and the record can be withheld only if the source provided the information under an explicit pledge of confidentiality. In order to prevent excessive use of confidential third party information OMB has advised agencies that pledges of confidentiality should be requested by the source and not offered routinely by the agency. The result, according to agency reports, has been that less information is provided, and that the information which is provided is less candid. For example:

- ° References and evaluations of job applicants by their former employers tend to be less thorough and less readily available (Department of Commerce, Agency for International Development, National Security Agency, Secret Service, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Federal Trade Commission).
- ° The quality of information available from medical sources has declined (Social Security Administration).

- Less unfavorable information is provided by third parties (Civil Service Commission).
- Within the Department of Justice, the FBI "has documented specific cases involving refusal of individuals to furnish information to them. They are developing an impact statement on this for departmental review."

The effects of the Act on the number of people seeking pledges of confidentiality and the resultant effects on agency operations is inconclusive at this time. However, it does not appear that the provisions have resulted in any significant increases in requests for confidentiality or that they have significantly hampered agency operations.

- Several agencies (Department of the Army, Bureau of Printing and Engraving in the Department of the Treasury, Department of Energy, ACTION, Federal Communications Commission and Federal Trade Commission) reported that few requests for such pledges are made.
- The National Security Agency, Department of Justice, Civil Service Commission, National Science Foundation, and the Department of Energy noted that derogatory information is often accompanied by a request for a pledge of confidentiality. The conclusion drawn by the National Science Foundation is that "it is clear that if we could not offer confidentiality, we would be unable to obtain candid evaluations..."
- The Securities and Exchange Commission and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration reported receiving more requests for pledges of confidentiality.

State and Local Privacy Laws

The increasing number of State and local government privacy laws enacted in recent years and their relationship to the Federal Privacy Act have created some problems. Federal agencies have encountered barriers when attempting to obtain certain information that was previously available from State and local government. While it is still too early to assess the full impact of these laws, they are beginning to change existing patterns of information exchange between Federal, State and local government. For example:

- Some agencies (the Departments of Agriculture, Defense and Transportation, the Central Intelligence Agency, the General Services Administration, the Civil Service Commission and the Federal Reserve System) reported that their access to State and local criminal records considered necessary for personnel investigations has been limited by the State and local authorities.

- ° The Securities and Exchange Commission noted that it was unable, because of a Tennessee law, to gain access to bank records needed for an investigation. The Securities and Exchange Commission brought suit against the State. As a result, the State law was declared unconstitutional to the extent that it denied the records to a Federal agency. SEC v. First Tennessee Bank N.A. Memphis W.D., Tenn. No. 77-2778.
- ° The FBI encountered problems in obtaining banking records, as well as credit and other financial data, and noted in its report that these obstacles have "added significantly to the total time required to bring these type investigations to a satisfactory conclusion."
- ° The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission reported that its regional offices have encountered statutory barriers to obtaining information, including local civil service examination material, education data, and public employment records.
- ° The Department of Commerce noted it had encountered difficulty in obtaining census and county income and employment data from some States.
- ° The Immigration and Naturalization Service reported that it had difficulty getting information about institutionalized aliens.

State and local privacy laws also sometimes conflict with the Federal Act in the kinds of information designated as publically releasable. For example, the Privacy Act limits the collection and disclosure of an individual's social security number. The Air Force reported that "the Social Security Number, as interpreted by the Social Security Administration of the State of Texas, is releasable under State law. Therefore, the Air Force finds itself in the position of protecting information which by State law is public property."

Although the extent of numerous State and local laws have added another dimension to existing Federal-State relationships no agency reported that unsolvable problems have been encountered.

VII EXERCISE OF INDIVIDUAL RIGHTS UNDER THE PRIVACY ACT

The Privacy Act establishes five basic rights of individuals who are the subjects of Federal recordkeeping. These are:

- The right to know the authority for collecting information about them, the purposes for which it is collected and the effect of not providing the information;
- The right of access to agency records about them;
- The right to request amendment, correction, or expungement of records about them;
- The right to appeal an adverse decision regarding either access or amendment within the agency to a higher authority in the agency; and
- The right to sue the agency in U. S. District Court to gain access to or amendment of records, or to obtain damages for violations of the Act which result in an injury to them.

Notification of Authority and Purpose

The Act establishes a basis for individuals to challenge the appropriateness of agency requests for information about themselves and to refuse to disclose certain information. The Act requires agencies to notify individuals from whom information is collected of:

- The statutory provision or Executive Order which authorizes collection of the information;
- The principal purpose(s) for which the information will be used by the agency;
- Other routine uses to be made of the information; and
- The effects, if any, on the individual of not providing all or any part of the information requested. If the agency requests the individual's Social Security Number (SSN), the agency must advise the individual whether disclosure of the SSN is voluntary or mandatory.

Two general conclusions can be drawn from agencies' experiences during 1977 with the notification provisions of the Act.

- ° The notification provisions have not significantly affected the willingness of individuals to provide information about themselves to the Government.
- ° The requirement to provide notification while sometimes cumbersome, has not adversely affected agency operations or the amount of information available to agencies for the conduct of Government functions.

Agencies' experiences reported in relation to the operation of the notification provision were as follows:

- ° Seventy-one agencies reported that the Act has had no adverse impact on information collection.
- ° The General Services Administration stated that the requirement "has not made any perceptible difference in the willingness of individuals to provide information about themselves--most employees receiving the Privacy Act statement tend to ignore the statement and few read its contents."
- ° The Department of the Army and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation reported that individuals actually seemed more willing to provide information about themselves as a result of the notification provisions. For example, Army stated that "[i]ncreased familiarity, on the part of individuals, with Privacy notification statements, has generally increased their willingness to provide information about themselves. There appears to be a general awareness on the part of individuals that they have the right to know why the information is requested and how it will be used."
- ° The Civil Service Commission found that the requirement has not affected the availability of information but that it is difficult to develop "succinct but informative statements that can be used on the forms themselves."
- ° The Department of Commerce noted that "the Bureau of Census indicates...that refusal rates in voluntary surveys have increased slightly, and attributes the increase to greater interviewer and respondent awareness of the right to privacy...the privacy notification statement...may contribute to the refusal rate increase. However, the Bureau reports no significant adverse effect on data quality."

- ° Only the Securities and Exchange Commission indicated that the notification requirement presented problems. Their report indicated that "there has been a significant change in the willingness of individuals to provide information. Individuals have expressed apprehension that information regarding their private affairs will 'routinely' be made available to any or all of the entities mentioned in the Commission's routine uses."

Requests for Access to Records

The Act also provides that individuals may have access to their records. Table VI provides a summary of information reported by agencies pertaining to requests for access to records which they received from individuals during 1977 and their actions in regard to those requests. It shows that:

- ° Agencies received 1,417,214 requests for access and granted (in full or part) 1,355,515 (95.6%).
- ° More than 97% of the requests for access were received by five agencies -- the Departments of Defense, Justice, Transportation, Health, Education and Welfare, and the Veterans Administration.

Comparing the information on requests for access reported in 1977 with that reported in 1976 (where available) shows an increasing trend in the number of individuals seeking access to their records.

- ° Requests received by the Department of Defense increased from 163,655 requests in 1976 to 258,471 requests in 1977.
- ° Requests received by the Department of Justice increased from 35,223 requests in 1976 to 37,618 requests in 1977.
- ° Requests received by the Central Intelligence agency increased from 2,356 requests in 1976 to 3,621 requests in 1977.

Trade Commission, the National Credit Union Administration, the National Labor Relations Board, the National Science Foundation, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, the Small Business Administration and ACTION were made by current or former Federal employees.

Requests for access to Government records received from the general public tend to focus upon a relatively small number of agencies.

- The Veterans Administration reported that most of the 922,811 requests which it received (which represent 65% of the 1.4 million request reported by all agencies) were from the general public.
- The Department of Justice reported that more than 97% of the 37,618 requests for access which it received were from persons other than Federal employees.
- The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare reported that 17,349 of the 21,655 requests received by the Public Health Service were from the general public.
- The Central Intelligence Agency reported that less than 10% of the 3,621 requests it received were from current or former Federal employees.
- The Department of the Treasury reported that approximately 38% of the 2,780 requests which it received were from the public at large. Approximately 50% of the 738 requests received by the Internal Revenue Service were from the public.
- The Selective Service System, Department of State and the Railroad Retirement Board also reported that most of the requests which they received were from the general public.

The agency reports for 1977 contained more information on requests for access to records than did the 1976 reports. This data indicates that access requests from members of the general public are directed primarily towards those agencies which administer social programs (Veterans Administration, Public Health Service) and those agencies which have an investigative function (FBI, CIA). However, there is insufficient evidence to conclude whether the Privacy Act has caused an increase in access requests. For example, the Veterans Administration reported that they have always received a large number of access requests and that the majority of 1977 requests did not cite the Privacy Act as a basis for their request.

Requests for Amendments of Records

The Act provides that individuals may request amendments or correction of their records which they believe are in error. Agency reports indicated that there were relatively few requests for amendments, that they were concentrated in a relatively small number of agencies, and that most of the requests for amendments were granted.

- The largest number of requests for amendments of records were received by the Department of Defense which received 15,048 in 1977 as compared to 11,043 in 1976. Of these 14,939 were granted in full, 43 were granted in part, 64 denied, and 2 were still pending.
- The Department of Health, Education and Welfare reported 7,295 amendment requests for its department-wide personnel systems, but did not indicate their disposition. Within the Public Health Service, 102 requests were made for amendment and 98 were granted in full. Four were denied.
- The Veterans Administration reported 3,780 amendment requests, but did not report their disposition.
- The Department of Transportation granted 505 of 514 requests.
- The Civil Service Commission granted more than half, or 75 of the 135 requests it received.
- The Department of State granted 38 of 42 requests.
- The General Services Administration granted 16 of 18 requests.
- Twelve agencies reported that they did not receive any requests to amend records.
- A total of 926 requests for amendments were received by thirteen additional agencies.
- Of the 197 requests for amendment received by the Department of Justice -- 131 were denied, 8 fully granted, and 58 were partially granted. Most of these requests were received by the FBI and pertained to criminal investigative records rather than administrative or other more routine records.

Appeals of Adverse Agency Decisions

The Privacy Act requires agencies to establish procedures whereby individuals may appeal denials of access and amendment requests to higher authorities in the agency than the official who made the initial determination.

The number of appeals reported for 1977 was somewhat larger than for 1976; and in general agencies sustained their initial decisions.

- The Department of Defense reported 61 appeals of denials of access. DOD's decision was sustained in 26 cases and reversed in 35. Of the 37 appeals of amendment denials, 26 were sustained and eleven reversed. This is a slight increase over 1976, when 39 access appeals were filed, with 18 sustained, 12 partially sustained and 9 reversed; and 47 amendment appeals were filed, in which 35 were sustained, 6 partially sustained, 4 were reversed, and 2 had been left pending at the end of the year.
- The Central Intelligence Agency reported 160 total appeals and sustained the agency decision in 17 cases and partially sustained it in 28. No decisions were reversed, 115 cases were carried over to 1978. By contrast, only 78 appeals had been received during 1976, and only 12 completed. Of the 12, five decisions were partially reversed, six were sustained, and one withdrawn.
- The Department of Justice had 2,261 new appeals filed during 1977 (compared to 1,556 in 1976). Four hundred and forty-four decisions were sustained, 1,067 were partially sustained, and 38 were reversed. The remainder were carried over to 1978.
- Of the remaining agencies, 19 reported receiving a total of 200 appeals. In most of these the agencies' decisions were sustained. As noted above, this is a moderate increase over the total of 132 filed during 1976.
- Twenty-one additional agencies which had received requests for access and amendments reported that no decisions were appealed.

Privacy Act Lawsuits

The Privacy Act provides that an individual may sue an agency in U. S. District Court to gain access to or amend a record, or to seek damages when the individual is injured as the result of a violation of the Privacy Act. The number of lawsuits has increased significantly during 1977. While most of the lawsuits relate to access or amendment, a substantial portion challenged disclosure policies or recordkeeping practices.

According to figures provided by the Department of Justice, 141 Privacy Act lawsuits were filed during 1977, which is a significant increase over the 69 filed during 1976.

Table VII indicates the provisions under which lawsuits were brought.

Although most suits sought access to or amendment of records (subsections (d) (1) and (d) (2), respectively), a substantial number of actions challenged agency disclosures of information (subsection (b)) and agency recordkeeping practices (subsection (e)).

VIII PUBLIC SCRUTINY OF FEDERAL PERSONAL RECORDKEEPING

The objectives of the public notice requirements of the Act and the requirement for agencies to publish rules pertaining to the administration of certain provisions of the Act are to:

- ° Prevent Federal agencies from maintaining secret systems of personal data on the American public,
- ° Subject the personal recordkeeping practices of Federal agencies to public scrutiny, and thereby
- ° Achieve an appropriate balance between the rights of individuals and the Federal Government's need for personal information in connection with the administration of programs.

Public Comment on Systems Notices and Rules

The Act requires agencies to annually publish in the Federal Register notices describing their systems of records and rules outlining procedures for public access to records.

Nearly three years of experience under the Privacy Act indicates that the Federal Register is not an effective means for obtaining public comment on agency Privacy Act issuances. The Federal Register is not widely known outside of Government circles, having a paid circulation (excluding the 15,000 copies provided to Federal agencies and the Congress) of only 37,000. As in previous years, agencies reported that rules and notices published in the Federal Register generated little or no public comment.

- ° Fifty-one agencies reported that they received no public comments on their Privacy Act issuances during calendar year 1977.
- ° Only six agencies (DOD/Army; HEW/Social Security Administration; Department of Energy; Veterans Administration; Equal Employment Opportunity Commission; and the National Science Foundation) reported that they received public comments on their Privacy Act issuances. Of these, only the Department of the Army received more than one comment.

The Office of Management and Budget has initiated action to increase public awareness of personal records maintained by Federal agencies. These actions have been developed in conjunction with the new systems reporting requirements described in a subsequent section of this report.

Publication of Notices and Rules in the Federal Register

As previously mentioned, the Act requires agencies to annually publish system notices and rules pertaining to their personal data systems in the Federal Register. The Act also requires the Office of the Federal Register to annually publish a compilation of all agency system notices and rules and make them available to the public at low cost.

The 1977 Compilation of Privacy Act Issuances totalled six volumes (3,400 pages) and sold for a total of $40.00. The cost of production was $23,000, and 353 volumes were sold, bringing in $2,375 to the Government Printing Office. The Department of Commerce suggested that this expense could be decreased if the compilation were reduced to a digest of system notices. A digest produced by the Office of the Federal Register in 1976 was quite successful, selling 6,200 copies at $5.00 each.

The cost to agencies for publishing documents in the Federal Register is $285 per page. Several agencies questioned whether this expense was justified in view of the small number of public comments received, and suggested changes in the requirement.

- The Department of Defense and the General Services Administration suggested that only notices of systems of records concerning the public be published in the Federal Register, while the notice of systems of records on Federal employees be provided through internal agency directives. This would result in considerable savings because those two agencies maintained records primarily on their own personnel rather than the general public. The Department of Defense estimates that it can make system notices and procedural rules available to DOD personnel through its own channels more efficiently and less expensively than through the Federal Register.
- The Central Intelligence Agency suggested that because "the public seldom uses the published systems of records as a key to obtain access to their files... (t)he possibility of each agency making available directly to the public on request a descriptive list of records systems should be considered. Expensive publication costs...could then be limited to only the deletion of an existing system or the addition of a new system."
- The Department of Commerce suggested a further modification, proposing that notice of new systems of records in the Federal Register be limited to a brief summary similar to that now published biweekly by OMB, referring the reader to the agencies for more information.
- The Department of Transportation and the National Transportation Safety Board suggested that the Federal Register publish only the annual republication and the compilation of issuances. The National Transportation Safety Board finds the annual republication requirement to be a useful discipline for assuring periodic review of system notices. To these agencies, the scattered publication of additions, changes, and deletions of systems is less useful than the single consolidated body of material provided by the annual republication.

- ° The General Services Administration suggested that the cost of the annual republication could be lowered without lessening its utility if it were modified to consist only of summaries of the system notices.

In order to reduce the cost and streamline the publication of the Privacy Act issuances, the Office of the Federal Register in coordination with the Office of Management and Budget has adopted the following plans for 1978.

- ° Only system notices which have been changed or added since the 1977 Compilation will be published in the Federal Register; unchanged notices will be incorporated by reference.
- ° The Office of the Federal Register will continue to publish the compilation of current agency issuances. The 1978 Compilation will take the form of a supplement to the 1977 Compilation.
- ° The Office of the Federal Register will issue a low cost digest of Privacy Act issuances.

Reports on New Systems

The Act states that "Each agency shall provide adequate advance notice to Congress and the Office of Management and Budget of any proposal to establish or alter any system of records in order to permit an evaluation of the probable or potential effect of such proposal on the privacy and other personal or property rights of individuals..."

OMB policies implementing this provision require agencies to submit reports on proposed new or altered systems to the Speaker of the House, the President of the Senate, and OMB 60 days prior to the issuance of any data collection instructions or issuance of any requests for proposals for contractor services to support such systems. OMB procedures permit a waiver of the advance notice requirement upon a showing that the delay caused by the 60 day advance notice would not be in the public interest.

Table VIII provides a summary of new system reports submitted by agencies during 1977, the extent to which waivers of the 60 day new system reporting requirements were requested and the final action on those waivers by OMB. Comparing this information with that reported in 1976 shows:

- ° A significant decrease in agency requests for waivers from the OMB 60 day advance notice period for new system reports. Only 54 waivers were requested in 1977 compared to 467 requests in 1976. OMB granted waivers for 51 of the requests and denied 3.
- ° A significant decrease in the number of new system reports submitted by agencies for "found" systems (existing systems subject to the Privacy Act but not made public previously due to administrative oversight), indicating that agencies have achieved more comprehensive compliance with the public notice requirements of the Act. During 1977, new systems reports were submitted for 48 "found" systems compared to 463 in 1976.
- ° A significant decrease in the total number of new system reports submitted by agencies for changed systems -- 65 in 1977 as compared to 280 in 1976.
- ° While the total number of new or changed systems reported in 1977 was down from 808 in 1976 to 256 in 1977, the total number of new systems reported increased from 65 in 1976 to 143 in 1977.

In essence, the new system reporting requirement provides a mechanism for Office of Management and Budget to monitor the growth of new personal data systems and assure that changes to existing systems are consistent with the intent of the Act. OMB staff reviewed each of these reports and provided comments or requested additional information on reports submitted by the Department of Defense, Department of Labor, ACTION, the Overseas Private Investment Corporation, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Federal Trade Commission, the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Department of Commerce, and the Postal Service. Only one agency (ACTION) reported that they had received comments from the Congress on a report on new systems.

While the new system reporting requirements were established primarily for the purposes of congressional and OMB oversight over the development of new (or altered) systems by agencies, they also provide an opportunity to achieve more effective public review than has been evidenced through publication of notices in the Federal Register.

To increase congressional and public awareness of new or altered systems proposed by agencies, OMB instituted a process whereby a summary of new system reports received by OMB is published in the Federal Register every 2-3 weeks and distributed to interested Members of Congress and staff. The circulation of this list will be expanded significantly during 1978 to include individuals and organizations interested in privacy both within and outside of Government.

Public Law 93-579
93rd Congress, S. 3418
December 31, 1974

An Act

To amend title 5, United States Code, by adding a section 552a to safeguard individual privacy from the misuse of Federal records, to provide that individuals be granted access to records concerning them which are maintained by Federal agencies, to establish a Privacy Protection Study Commission, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Privacy Act of 1974".

Sec. 2. (a) The Congress finds that—

(1) the privacy of an individual is directly affected by the collection, maintenance, use, and dissemination of personal information by Federal agencies;

(2) the increasing use of computers and sophisticated information technology, while essential to the efficient operations of the Government, has greatly magnified the harm to individual privacy that can occur from any collection, maintenance, use, or dissemination of personal information;

(3) the opportunities for an individual to secure employment, insurance, and credit, and his right to due process, and other legal protections are endangered by the misuse of certain information systems;

(4) the right to privacy is a personal and fundamental right protected by the Constitution of the United States; and

(5) in order to protect the privacy of individuals identified in information systems maintained by Federal agencies, it is necessary and proper for the Congress to regulate the collection, maintenance, use, and dissemination of information by such agencies.

(b) The purpose of this Act is to provide certain safeguards for an individual against an invasion of personal privacy by requiring Federal agencies, except as otherwise provided by law, to—

(1) permit an individual to determine what records pertaining to him are collected, maintained, used, or disseminated by such agencies;

(2) permit an individual to prevent records pertaining to him obtained by such agencies for a particular purpose from being used or made available for another purpose without his consent;

(3) permit an individual to gain access to information pertaining to him in Federal agency records, to have a copy made of all or any portion thereof, and to correct or amend such records;

(4) collect, maintain, use, or disseminate any record of identifiable personal information in a manner that assures that such action is for a necessary and lawful purpose, that the information is current and accurate for its intended use, and that adequate safeguards are provided to prevent misuse of such information;

(5) permit exemptions from the requirements with respect to records provided in this Act only in those cases where there is an important public policy need for such exemption as has been determined by specific statutory authority; and

(6) be subject to civil suit for any damages which occur as a result of willful or intentional action which violates any individual's rights under this Act.

Sec. 3. Title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding after section 552 the following new section:

Nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize any civil action by reason of any injury sustained as the result of a disclosure of a record prior to the effective date of this section.

“(b) RIGHTS OF LEGAL GUARDIANS.—For the purposes of this section, the parent of any minor, or the legal guardian of any individual who has been declared to be incompetent due to physical or mental incapacity or age by a court of competent jurisdiction, may act on behalf of the individual.

Inventory of Federal Personal Data Systems

The Inventory of Federal Personal Data Systems is a listing of 6,424 systems of records subject to the Privacy Act for which notices were filed with the Office of the Federal Register on or before December 31, 1977 by 92 Federal agencies.

The inventory was established to--

- Compile the information required by the Privacy Act (at 5 U.S.C. 552a(p)) to be included in the President's annual report to the Congress.
- Assist the Office of Management and Budget in discharging its responsibility under the Act to "provide continuing ...oversight of the implementation of [5 U.S.C. 552a] by agencies."

The listing shows, for each system--

- The system name.
- The system number - a unique identifier assigned by OMB to each system, consisting of a four-digit organization code and a sequential number.
- The date and page number of the latest system notice filed for publication in the Federal Register.
- A code indicating whether the system is automated, manual, or a hybrid system which includes both automated and manual records.
- A code indicating the purpose of the system as either--
 - An administrative system - dealing with the internal operation of Government, such as personnel records, travel records, or parking permit records.
 - A domestic assistance program system - operating in support of a program listed in the "Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance." A Federal domestic assistance program is generally defined as a function of a Federal agency which provides assistance or benefits which can be requested or applied for by organizations or individuals; or - Any other agency program system - pertaining to an agency's substantive program other than those included in the "Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance."

- ° A code indicating the type of activity supported by the system in terms of the governmental function served (e.g., agriculture, health, income security) as described in the fiscal year 1978 "Budget of the United States Government." A list of budget function codes is appended to this volume.
- ° An estimate of the number of individuals on whom records are contained in the system. This number represents the agency's best estimate of the number of individuals about whom information is maintained rather than the number of pieces of information or files. For some systems, e.g., case files, there may be more than one file on an individual.
- ° A code indicating whether the system includes a public report subject to the Federal Reports Act.
- ° Information on the extent to which agencies have claimed exemptions from certain provisions of the Act under subsections (j) and (k) of the Act including--
 - The provision(s) of the Act authorizing the exemption.
 - The number of individuals whose records fall within the exemption. If an exemption is authorized under more than one provision, the number of records exempted under each is shown. Since the same record may be subject to more than one exemption the sum of the number of records exempted may exceed the number of records in the system.
 - The date and page number in the Federal Register of the rule claiming the exemption.
