CHINESE RAILWAY LINES AND STATIONS
Second Edition

Annex

The following information is reported in the 15 April 1958 issue of T'ieh-lu Shang-wu Chuan-k'an (Railway Commerce Bulletin):

1. On the ^{Ch'ang-T'u} ~~Sau-Mei~~ Line, the boundary between the Shen-yang and Chi-lin Railway Administrations was moved so that station Ch'ang-ch'un-tung is now under the Shen-yang Railway Administration; all stations east of Ch'ang-ch'un-tung remain under the Chi-lin Railway Administration.
2. On the Shen-Chi Line, the boundary between the Shen-yang and Chi-lin Railway Administrations was moved so that the Shen-yang Railway Administration now extends only to Fu-shun-ch'eng (which include).
3. The connecting line from Chang-chia-k'ou to K'ung-chia-chuang, 10 kms. in length, as shown at D4 on the schematic diagram, has been abolished.
4. In the vicinity of Peking (D4 on the schematic diagram), the Hsi-Kuang Connecting Line (Pei-ching-hsi to Kuang-an-men, not Hsi-chih-men to Kuang-an-men as previously believed) has been partially closed, the section from Hsi-pien-men to Pei-ching-hsi having been abolished. The schematic diagram should be altered to appear as follows:

5. The following stations have been renamed:
Chao-i (6392-0122), Nan-T'ung-P'u Line, renamed Yung-chi (3057-3444).
Yung-chi (3057-3444), Nan-T'ung-P'u Line, renamed P'u-chou (5543-1558).
Mei-lieh (2734-0441); Ying-Hsia Line, renamed San-ming (0005-2494).
Yü-huang (3768-4106), Yeh-Ch'ih Line, renamed Yüan-pao-shan (0337-1405-1472).
6. Distances of the following stations are confirmed as follows:
Mao-chia-chuang (3029-1367-8369), Lung-Hai Line, at km. 1333. This station is under the Lan-chou Railway Administration.
Ch'ing-shan-ch'üan (7230-1472-3123), Liu-Chia Line, at km. 8.

CHINESE RAILWAY LINES AND STATIONS

(Second Edition)

This report is a second edition of a report of the same name published as C3-58 on 1 April 1958. The present work differs from its predecessor chiefly in the inclusion of a new section: a listing of the Chinese railway stations according to the Standard Chinese Telegraphic Code numbers for the Chinese characters of the stations' names.

This second edition also contains hundreds of additions to the list of stations published in the original edition, as well as an expanded railway line index and an additional chart showing the jurisdictions of the several Chinese railway administrations.

SOURCES OF INFORMATION

The bulk of the information presented in this report has been obtained from two primary Chinese-language sources:

1. Ch'ian-kuo T'ieh-lu Lü-k'o Lieh-ch'e Shih-k'o-piao (National Railway Passenger Train Schedules), issues of November 1955, winter 1956, and summer 1957, published in Peking by the Ministry of Railways of the Chinese People's Republic.
2. T'ieh-lu Shang-wu Chuan-k'an (Railway Commerce Bulletin), numerous issues from 1955 through early 1958, published monthly in Peking by the Ministry of Railways of the Chinese People's Republic.

Other sources of information include the following:

3. Weekly Information Report on Communist China, numerous issues. (FOR OFFICIAL USE ONLY)
4. Daily Report - Foreign Radio Broadcasts, Far East Section, Foreign Broadcast Information Service, numerous issues. (FOR OFFICIAL USE ONLY)
5. Jen-min T'ieh-tao (People's Railways), a newspaper published in Peking, various issues through 1957.
6. Renmin Ribao (formerly Jen-min Jih-pao) (People's Daily), Peking, various issues.
7. Jen-min Shou-ts'e (People's Handbook), Peking, 1957, and Tientsin, 1956, 1955, published by the Da Gong Bao (formerly Ta Kung Pao) Company.
8. Peking Review, an English-language weekly published in Peking since 4 Mar 58, especially issue number 8, 22 Apr 58, p. 12.
9. Chung-kuo Ku-chin Ti-ming Ta-tz'u-tien (A Comprehensive Chinese Gazetteer), by TSANG Li-ho et al, The Commercial Press, Ltd., Shanghai, 1930.
10. Manshukoku Chimei Daijiten (Gazetteer of Manchoukuo), by YAMAZAKI Sōyo, Tokyo, 1941.
11. Chung-kuo Yü-wen (The Chinese Language Monthly), Peking, October 1957, p. 9
12. A multitude of Chinese maps published in China during the period 1950 through 1957.

PART I

CHINESE RAILWAY STATIONS

This section lists all known railway stations of mainland China in an alphabetical order based upon the capabilities of the I.B.M. machinery. This order differs from a straight alphabetical list in that the aspirated Chinese syllables (those with an apostrophe) are listed preceding unaspirated syllables whenever these syllables occur in the first position. However, when occurring in the second or third position, aspirated syllables follow unaspirated syllables of the same spelling. Furthermore, syllables which are romanized with an aspiration mark following the second consonant (as TZ'U) will be found closer to their correct position, as in the following sample which shows the typical order of alphabetization employed in this report:

T'UNG-CHING
 T'UNG-CH'UAN
 TA-CHUANG
 TA-CH'AI-KOU
 TI-WO-P'U
 TIENTSIN
 TOU-YU
 TS'O-CHEN
 TSAO-CHUANG
 TSO-CHIA
 TZ'U-YAO
 TZU-CHUNG

The four columns in Part I contain the following information:

Column 1 - Railway station names in the I.B.M.-modified alphabetical sequence. (For names followed by "#", see note following LI-CHAN LINE on p. 93.) The umlauts which should appear over certain of the "u"s could not be handled efficiently by the I.B.M. machines.

Column 2 - Chinese Standard Telegraphic Code (STC) numbers representing the Chinese characters of the station name. Characters not in the STC are represented by two STC numbers connected by a plus sign (+), it being understood that the two characters should be combined to form the single wanted character. Liberal use has been made of STC numbers for the recent officially-adopted abbreviations of characters.

Column 3 - Distance of the station in kilometers from the point of origin of the line as found in Part II. Plus (+) and minus (-) distances identify stations not actually on the line indicated but which are served by trains operating on the line. Distances enclosed in parentheses are interpolated and were omitted in the sources.

Column 4 - Railway line (Chinese name) on which the station is located. Expansions of these names will be found in Part IV.

Asterisks in the left margin of Part I indicate the proper locations for adding the entries listed in the addenda on page 58.

PART II

CHINESE RAILWAY LINES

This section is a listing of Chinese railway lines by their Chinese names primarily as they appear in the Railway Commerce Bulletin and the National Railway Passenger Train Schedules (see p. ii), with all stations listed in geographical sequence under each line.

Some of the minor lines in this list have not been found cited or listed in either of the two main sources mentioned above. They do, however, appear on the schematic diagram of the Chinese railway system that is always included in each book of schedules, and have been assigned names by the compiler of this report. For instance, a short branch line in Shanghai serving the port area of Jih-hui-kang is shown on these diagrams, but is not contained in the passenger train schedules and has never been noted in available issues of the Railway Commerce Bulletin; it is probably used exclusively for freight. This line has been given the name Jih-hui-kang Branch Line in this report; other lines have been similarly named.

Still other lines have been identified only in the Ministry of Railways' monthly Railway Commerce Bulletin. These lines are mostly short connecting lines, new branches, or other new lines still operating on a provisional basis. Examples of such lines are the Hsi-Kuang Connecting Line in Peiking and the new lines radiating from Pao-t'ou.

Several Chinese railway lines are concurrently known by two or more names in official usage, insofar as the two major sources of information can be considered official. In source 1, for instance, a certain railway line is continually referred to as the Mi-Lin Line, whereas in source 2 it is called Lin-Mi Line. Another example is the line named Hsteh-Shan in source 1, while it appears as Hsteh-Chao Line in source 2. The reason for this lack of unanimity in the official Ministry of Railways' publications is not known.

Part II in this second edition is simply a relisting of the stations given in Part I, although arranged according to geographical order by railway line. The railway lines fall in alphabetical order according to the I.B.M. limitations as explained on p. iii. Information concerning station remainings, abolitions, or additions will be found under the individual station entry in Part I, and most explanatory information concerning the railway lines themselves will be found in Part IV under the appropriate line entry.

In many cases the distances given in Part II have been adjusted from those appearing in the major sources to eliminate duplicate measurement of routes. For instance, the Shen-An Line appears in the National Schedules with distances measured from Shen-yang, but this line shares trackage with the Ch'ang-Ta Line as far as Su-chia-t'ung, 16 kilometers from Shen-yang. Thus the distances given in this report for the stations of the Shen-An Line will be 16 kilometers less than those given in the National Schedules.

Columnar arrangement in this section is identical with that in Part I, explained on page iii.

PART III
CHINESE RAILWAY STATIONS
ARRANGED BY CHINESE CHARACTERS
AS REPRESENTED BY CHINESE STANDARD TELEGRAPHIC CODE NUMBERS

This section lists all Chinese railway stations according to the numerical sequence of the Chinese Standard Telegraphic Code (STC) numbers for the Chinese characters in the railway station names.

The few stations listed in the addenda on page 58 have not been added to this section. Should the user not be able to find a station in this list, he should check this addenda.

Columnar arrangement of Part III is the same as in the two preceding sections, except that the first and second columns have been transposed.

Maximum use has been made throughout this report of STC numbers for the new official character abbreviations recently adopted by the Chinese Communists. Users familiar with the STC should bear in mind that if they cannot locate a certain STC entry in this section, the character should be checked to determine whether there is a recognized abbreviation or simpler variant with its own STC number.

PART IV
INDEX OF CHINESE RAILWAY LINES

Past, Present, and Future

This index lists all known currently-operating regular railways of China, as well as old lines that have since been renamed, consolidated, extended, or destroyed, and all railways known to be under construction or projected for construction in the near future.

Each railway line (with the exception of a few dated schemes) has at least two entries in this list: one by the line name (always given in the upper case), the other by the names of its terminal points. For example, the railway from Peking to Canton is entered under its formal name (CHING-KUANG LINE) way from Peking to Canton is entered under its formal name (CHING-KUANG LINE) way from Peking to Canton is entered under its formal name (CHING-KUANG LINE) way from Peking to Canton is entered under its formal name (CHING-KUANG LINE). Entries are arranged in this section in straight alphabetical order, with no attention paid to hyphens, dashes, or I.B.M. machines.

Of the line names themselves, there are two types. The major type is a formal name composed of elements or abbreviations of the names of the line's two terminal points combined into a single name. Thus the name of the CHIANG-PIN LINE extending from Chi'ang-ch'un to Ha-erh-pin is derived from the underscored elements of the two terminal cities' names. The other type of line name is one in which the line itself (usually a branch line) bears the name of its end station, or original end station prior to subsequent extension. For instance, the short branch railway from Nan-ting to Lo-chia-chuang is officially known as the LO-CHIA-CHUANG LINE. Official designations of some of these branch lines have not yet been found in available source materials. In such cases, a name based on the foregoing example, and usually including the word "branch", has been assigned to the line by the compiler of this report. The JIH-HUI-KANG BRANCH LINE is such a line: it may eventually be found to have been named HSIN-JIH LINE by the Ministry of Railways.

In the listings that follow, underscored entries indicate the railways which are currently in operation in mainland China, and will thus also be found in Part II of this report. Letter-digit coordinates are given for these lines which locate them on the schematic diagram of the Chinese railway system found on page 195; page references to their listings in Part II are also given.

SINGLE-CHARACTER ABBREVIATIONS OF CHINESE PROVINCES AND CITIES

The following are single-character abbreviations used for Chinese provinces and cities, most of which occur in railway line names. The characters given here do not occur in the regular names of the places, being derived from classical usage. Many other single-character abbreviations are in common use which consist of simply one of the two or more characters of the place name, expansions of which are easily ascertainable.

Abbreviation	STC	Expansion
Chi	0370	Hopeh Province
Ch'ien	7816	Kweichow Province
Chin	2516	Shansi Province
Ch'in	4440	Shensi Province
Ching	0079	Peking (formerly used for Nanking)
Chu	4591	Kuei-yang (Kweiyang)
Ch'uan	1557	Szechwan Province
Hsiang	3276	Hunan Province
Hsi	0650	I-pin (Ipin)
Hsün	3410	Chiu-chiang (Kiukiang)
Hu	3337	Shang'ai
Jung	2827	Fu-chü (Foochow)
Jung	5554	Ch'eng-tu (Chengtu)
Kan	6373	Kiangsi Province
Kuei	2710	Kwangsi Province
Lu	7627	Shantung Province
Lung	7150	Kansu Province
Mien	4884	Burma
Min	7044	Fukien Province
Ning	1337	Nan-ching (Nanking)
O	6759	Hupeh Province
Pien	3079	K'ai-feng (Kaifeng)
