50X1-HUM

A new system of evaluating officers has been introduced in the army. The unit of each officer concerned now receives an order from the next highest command to make the evaluation; at the same time the officer's unit is instructed as to whether or not his promotion is to be recommended. Certain officers generally considered inefficient have been ordered recommended for promotion because they had been found politically satisfactory. On the other hand, the commander of an aviation regiment was dismissed because he refused to obey an order to recommend a certain officer for promotion. Many efficient officers have been denied the promotion recommended by their regimental commanders because they were not considered sufficiently trustworthy politically.
