- About 30 twin-engine low-wing monoplanes, parked in two rows with their engines and cockpits covered by tarpaulins, and some biplanes were at the Drewitz (O 52/A 68) airfield. A small hangar on the western edge of the field was empty. Some of the twin-engine planes had a weapon projecting from the rear of the cockpit. Their undersides were painted light blue and the upper sides green. A biplane too, off at 2:45 p.m. and headed southwest. There was no other flying. AA gun emplacements, radio stations or radar sets were not seen. *
